Japanese Press Bitter Over Hull's Statement On Dutch East Indies

Declare No Peace Can Be Expected until Status Quo Is Replaced by a Fair and New Order

Tokyo, April 19 (Friday) (AP)—The Japanese press, declaring that the United States and Japan have different ideas regarding the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies, today sharply attacked what it called "threats" by Secreatry of State Cordell Hull in proclaiming a "hands off" policy for the rich Holland possessions.

The newspaper Hochi said the four-power and nine-power pacts were aimed at maintaining the status quo in the Pacific but that "they manifestly are incompatible with the Japanese viewpoint that until the unfair status quo, not only in the far east but in the whole world, is replaced b ya fair and new order, no peace can be expected.

"No doubt the Hull statement was intended as a political move to restrain Japan's southward expansion but the United States sholud know that such an attempt would only inflame the Japanese."

The press generally agreed that Hull's statement constituted a "threat" of United States intervention in the East Indies in the event their status should be changed as a result of the Netherlands becoming involved in the European War.

Japanese leaders' concern over the fate of The Netherlands East Indies should Holland become involved in the European war, intensified by Secretary of State Hull's declaration on the subject, found expression in consultations of the privy council and cabinet ministers.

Several ministers called on Premier Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai for information after reading Hull's statement urging maintenance of the status quo of the indies.

Leaders Back Arita

Previously foreign minister Hachiro Arita had been called on to report to the privy council, highest advisory body to the emperor.

Japanes officials, ignoring the interpretation given the Hull statement in many capitals—that it was a warning to Japan—contended it was completely in accord with the Japanese puosition as first expressed Monday by Arita.

At that time, after a conference with General J. C. Pabst, Netherlands minister here, Arita declared that Japan would be gravely concerned over any alterations in the status of the Indies.

Senate Approves Construction of New Naval Ships

Only Four Senators Vote against New Deal Program

Washington, April 18 (AP)—The Senate gave a thumping endorsement to faster naval construction today, voting 63 to 4 to approve navy expenditures of $963,797,478 in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The measure, containing funds to start work on two new battleships and 471 warplanes, among other units, won quick passage with only Senators Johnson (D-Colo), Danaher (R-Conn), Reed (R-Kan) and Capper (R-Kan) voting against it.

Chairman Walsh (D-Mass) of the Senate naval affairs committee said it was the smallest vote against a naval supply bill he had seen in twenty years in Congress. It was apparent that European war developments had smoothed the bill's path. The measure now goes back to the House, which originally voted a $965,779,438 bill.

Editors Hear FDR "Off the Record"

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Behind the closed doors of state department and White House, editors of the nation's Metropolitan press went hunting today for stories of American foreign and domestic policy which they may never print.

The newsmen, members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, went into off-the-record conferences with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles this afternoon and President Roosevelt tonight, but it was stipulated that the talks were "off the record."

Earlier, the 125 or more editors began swapping views on their own problems, discussing principally the merits of local and syndicated newspaper features and reader surveys, and heard their president, Donald J. Sterling of the Oregon Journal at Portland, tell them:

"The newspaper of late has accepted too many blows below the belt without taking a sock at the unreasoning critic who confounds news with propaganda and thereby prostitutes the very freedom of the press whose cause he professes to espouse."

Applauding Kansas City and New Orleans papers which have exposed "public wrongs," Sterling asserted that the American press, in spite of financial harrassment, is still solvent and free, responsible and decent, greater "in its scope of service," forty-two percent more widely read daily than twenty years ago and eighty-four percent more on Sunday.

Britain Landing More Troops for Battle in Norway

SUBJECT AIR BASES TO DAILY ATTACKS

Raid Stavanger and Machine Gun Nazi Planes and Runways

London, April 18 (AP)—Britain strengthened her position in Norway tonight by landing more troops along rocky inlets of the coast and establishing contacts with Norwegian forces in preparation for a first major clash with the occupying Germans.

British planes subjected Nazi air bases to daily attacks, meanwhile.

A terse eighteen-word war office communique said "operations are proceeding" in Norway and that "the landing of British troops continues."

As in Monday's ten-word announcement that the British had landed at "several" points, today's communique gave no indication of where the reinforcements were being put ashore.

With Royal Aair force bombers flying from British stations and fleet air arm planes operating from naval vessels in the North sea, the British announced harassing operations against Germany's communication lines with the following results in the last forty-eight hours:

A Nazi transport was sunk and a submarine hit by bombs off Bergen Tuesday.

Stravanger Twice Raided

Stravanger airport in southern Norway—regarded by the British as Norway's only satisfactory airfield outside Oslo for large scale German aerial German aerial operations—was raided twice last night, for the eighth and ninth times.

Driving their planes low across Stavanger airport, the British pilots bombed and machine gunned grounded German planes and runways.

"Direct hits were observed on runways and bombs were seen to burst among transport aircraft parked on the southwest side of the airdrome," the air ministry reported.

Three Planes Lost

Three planes failed to return from the hour-long attacks. Two big German planes were downed.

These air attacks followed a naval bombardment of Stavanger yesterday. A British cruiser which was hit by an air bomb then reached her base safely today.

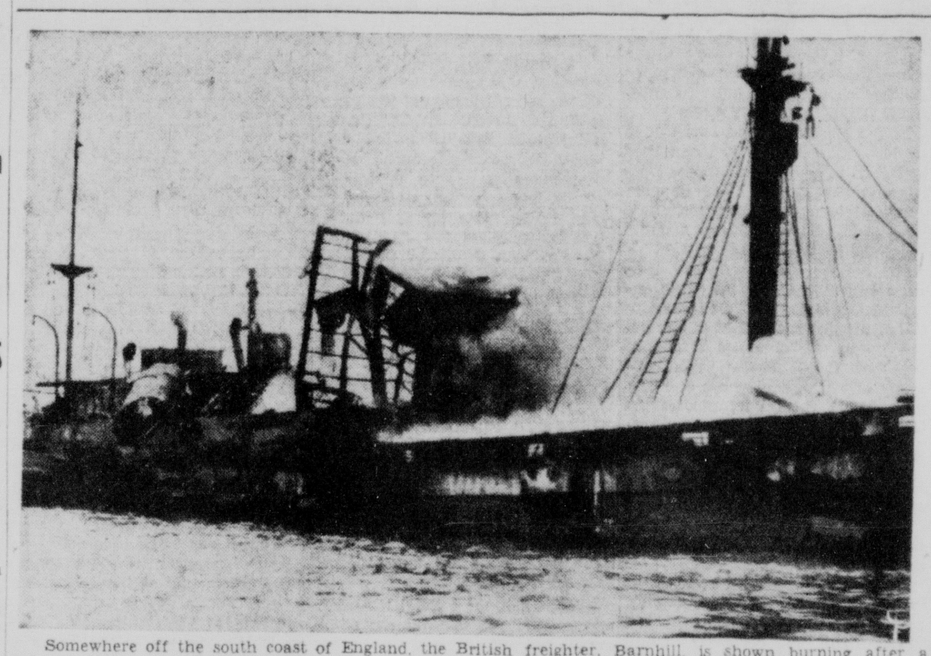

On diplomatic fronts as fiercely active as the Scandinavian war front, Britain gave a curt "no" to demands of the Congress party of India for complete independence, and matched closely for the portent of a hostil Italian press campaign and of Japanese feelers toward the Netherlands East Indies.

Sir Hugh O'Neill, parliamentary under-secretary for India, told the House of Commons the British government could not grant India complete independent and that if the nationalist Congress party carried through its threat of another civil disobedience campaign Britain would employ "full measures" to hold control.

Farley Suggests 'Simple' Solution Of Economic Ills

Says Leaders Can Solve Problem If They Are Not Selfish

GUEST OF HONOR AT TESTIMONIAL DINNER

Says Benefits from New Deal Have Not Been Fully Harvested

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, April 18 (AP)—Postmaster General James A. Farley, a presidential aspirant, declared tonight that a "simple" solution of the national economic problem could be found in harmonious action by leaders of industry, transportation, finance, agriculture and labor.

He suggested that they be brought "together in frank discussion," and that they "submerge their selfishness."

"Let them acquaint each other with their problems," he added. "If they do, and are frank with each other, I am confident a workable plan that will fit in with the liberal economy of the present day can be formulated."

Guest of Leaders

He made this suggestion in a speech at a testimonial dinner in his honor to which about 2,500 Democratic party leaders and workers had accepted invitation.

Among the most significant of the speeches saluting him was one by Senator Wagner (D-NY).

The dinner was intended as a national democration to underline the belief of politicians that the postmaster general could have all or substantially all of the New York delegation at the Democratic convention if President Roosevelt did not stand for renomination.

Mildly Praises New Deal

Farley praised the Roosevelt administration generally, but said that at the beginning of the president's first term the situation was so "serious" that "laws relating to economic rehabilitation were legislated with a celerity that was as much of a shock to business as it was a surprise to labor," and added:

"That the benefits flowing from this legislation have not been fully harvested is admitted. To achieve its objectives is the most pressing task confronting us today." Farley declared "we stand 100 per cent behind the Roosevelt policy on foreign relations. We want no part of the war in the other hemisphere and we will permit no part of it to come to this hemisphere."

Germany Claims New Victories in Norway

Reports Successes against British in the Air and along Coast

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, April 18, (AP) — Germany fought doggedly ahead toward the conquest of Norway today in the tenth day of her occupation and claimed achievements in the air and on the sea against Britain's challenge.

Authorized sources said that as a result of successes along the Norwegian coast they felt justified in declaring:

"If the British think they can establish naval bases in Norway our activity and successes the past two dayss should teach them differently."

The German high command, officially chronicling a claim already published by DNB, official news agency, said German warplanes sank one British cruiser yesterday off Norway, badly damaged light and heavy cruisers with four direct hits, bombed one destroyer, and hit one of two Norwegian torpedoboatss north of Arendal. (British admitted only that a cruiser had been struck, but said she was able to steam back to port.)

Norway Ready To Battle Germans

London, April 19—(Friday) (AP)—A Norwegian government communique early today said it had received reports from its commanders in the north and north of Trondheim indicating that Norwegian mobilization has been completed and that the commanders "are of the opinion that they can stand up to the German forces."

"The British continue to land troops at various points along the Norwegian coast," the communique said. "Norwegian troops have entered into contact with British troops by land and sea."

The text of the communique, as relayed by Reuters, British news agency:

Committee Approves Bombing of Goats To Test Explosives

Washington, April 18 (AP) — Despite protests from pet-lovers, a Senate-House committee approved today an experimental bombing of seventy goats to ascertain the killing power of the secret "super explosive" which Lester P. Barlow, Baltimore inventor, says he has perfected.

The test will be conducted at the army's Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds April 30 unless it is blocked by court action.

A Maryland law forbids experiments on animals except when "justified" by the public interest, and the publishers of an Illinois pet magazine filed suit at Towson, Md., ten days ago for an injunction restraining Barlow from carrying out his proposed test. A hearing was set for April 23.

The complaining magazine contended that such a test would be "ghastly, inhuman, cruel and sanguinary."

Ohioan Believes Cards Are Stacked in Favor of Dewey

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, April 18 (AP) — Senator Taft (R-O), deciding today the political cards were "stacked" against him in Maryland, let that state's sixteen Republican convention go to Thomas E. Dewey without a struggle.

Dewey, fresh from his midwestern triumphs and powerfully backed by local Maryland organizations, had virtually dared the Ohioan to make a contest of it in the coming Maryland preference primary. In the circumstances, Taft decided there was more to be gained by staying out than by going in.

But, in announcing his decision, he said that although local organizations would control the voting, a poll showed "no preponderance of sentiment" for Dewey among the public at large Tnd, noting that Dewey had entered byt five of thirteen state primaries, he said he presumed the New Yorker had stayed out of others because the local organizations were against him.

Rep. Fish Charges Roosevelt Is Seeking WPA Cash for Campaign

Washington, April 18, (AP) — Signs of a fight appeared in Congress today after President Roosevelt had requested permission to spend a $975,000,000 WPA appropriation for the next fiscal year in eight months if he found it necessary to do so.

While the Democratic supporters of the administration generally applauded the suggestion, Rep. Fish (R.-N. Y.), arose on the House floor to demand. "Is this another campaign slush fund? Does it mean that another 500,000 people are going to be padded onto the rolls during September, October and November at public expense?"

Mr. Roosevelt put his request on the ground that no one had the foggiest idea at present whether the country was going to have a boom that would provide additional private employment.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, which was read to the House, he said there was certainly no information now available to justify a reduction in the WPA program below that carried on in the current fiscal year with an appropriation of approximately $1,500,000,000.

If more than $975,000,000 proved necessary to finance work relief through the final four months of next year, he said, Congress could act at its next session on this question and consider also, possibly whether additional taxation was needed to provide the added funds.

Rep. Ditter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, told reporters that the permission asked by the President to spend the fund in eight months might, in an election year, "offer temptations that I feel certain the Democratic party would not care to deal with."

Invaded Nation Faces Severe Test as Nazis Expand Sweeping Gains

Norwegian Government Sources Declare Their Forces Can Hold Present Positions North of Trondheim, but Otherwise Paint Gloomy Picture of Situation; Nazis Still Hold Narvik

Stockholm, April 19—(Friday)—(AP)—Norwegian government sources reported early today that Norway's civil and military authorities north of Trondheim have declared their confidence in their ability to hold their present positions, with German troops concentrating at that key western port in apparent expectation of a major battle.

The Norwegian troops have established a connection with forces of the Allied powers in the Trondheim area both by sea and air, a statement from the Norwegian legation here said, and have held their first joint military conference at a Norwegian headquarters.

An oral summary of the situation by the Norwegians said the Germans had attempted to take Namsos, a port 100 miles north of Trondheim, by using airplanes, but were believed to have been forced back by Allied troops at that place.

Outlook Appears Gloomy

This oral summary gave an otherwise gloomy picture of the situation faced by little Norway, which is struggling against the tightening Nazi grip on the country, especially in the south about Oslo.

The Germans still hold Narvik, it was said, and are attempting to push northward toward the junction of the Swedish and Finnish borders. They also control the railway to the Swedish border.

They are expanding their gains in the Oslo district, where, however, three Norwegian forts are putting up stout resistance.

Forts Holding Fast

Trogstad fortress, ten miles south of captured Eidsvold, and Hoetrop fortress, also in the district near Oslo, are holding fast behind their big guns and well-stocked commissaries.

Also besieged is the Fosseim fortress near Mysen, fifty miles southeast of Oslo, where the defenders apparently are bent on duplicating the feat of the Alcazar garrison of the Spanish Civil war.

These Norwegians are reported supplied with heavy artillery, ammunition and provisions for a long seiege in their concrete forts.

Further north, a similar situation is reported at the Hegra fortress, twenty-five miles east of Trondheim, where about 100 men are resisting despite bombardment by German artillery and 1,000-pound aerial bombs which have silenced some of their guns. The fortress is on the Trondheim railway which runs to the Swedish border and which is held by the Germans.

The Norwegians are backing up the Trogstad and Hoetorp forts in positions stretching in a line along the southern edge of three "finger lakes," Mjosa Randsfjord and Sperillen, which point toward Oslo.

Germans Pushing Forward

South of that line and threatening its east end, however, the Germans are pushing forward.

The Nazis are reported advancing in force north of Kongsvinger, near the Swedish border, using trucks, busses and field guns and liberal quantities of machine guns.

They are believed engaged now on the Flisa river, an eastern tributary of the Glomma, in a flanking drive on Elverum, Lake village seventy-five miles north of Oslo.

Nazis Hold Kongsberg

They have captured Kongsberg, southeast o. Oslo, and destroyed the broadcasting station.

Further to the south, they hold Kristiansand, Evje and Egersund, southeastern coast town" which is the terminus of the cable to England.

Along the frontier east of Oslo Swedish frontier guards looked on impassively as Norwegian guards were replaced by German sentries.

Norwegian soldiers escaping across this section of the frontier mounted to 4,000.

The reports from Trondheim indicated that both German and Norwegian forces expected a battle imminently.

Swedish correspondents informed their newspapers that a Norwegian force, apparently preparing for an early attack, was massed on the inner part of Trondheim fjord, within railroad reach of Namsos, about 100 miles north, where British troops were reported to have landed.

J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press correspondent, made his way to the environs of Narvik yesterday afternoon and encountered British in

Christian Front Leaders Said To Have Adopted Hitler's Plans

New York, April 18 (AP) — Claus Gunther Ernecke, the sedition trial defendant who removed himself from the picture by suicide, once likened the position of "leaders in the Christian Front" to that of Adolf Hitler at the time of his abortive beer-hall putsch, and FBI special agent testified today.

"If their objective failed, they'd be found dead in the gutter," agent Peter J. Wachs said Ernecke explained. "If they won, they would rule the country."

This alleged statement by Ernecke, and other details of the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the government, Wachs told a federal court jury, were overheard by him during many days and nights he eaves-dropped in the attic of a house where Denis Healy, chief prosecution witness, entertained accused plotters.

Healy, himself, engaged by the FBI to spy upon the alleged conspirators, completed eight days on the witness stand before Wachs took up the bizarre story.

"Ernecke told Healy during a conversation last September that the Christian Front had been organized to eradicate Jews from the business and professional life of the United States," Wachs declared. "He said that unless the Jews were stopped the country would be faced with a Communist revolution and the Jews would control everything."

The federal agent quoted William Gerald Bishop, one of the sixteen defendants remaining on trial, as having told Haely at another time that he had given machine gun training to about forty men.

These Norwegians are reported supplied with heavy artillery, ammunition and provisions for a long seiege in their concrete forts.

Further north, a similar situation is reported at the Hegra fortress, twenty-five miles east of Trondheim, where about 100 men are resisting despite bombardment by German artillery and 1,000-pound aerial bombs which have silenced some of their guns. The fortress is on the Trondheim railway which runs to the Swedish border and which is held by the Germans.

The Norwegians are backing up the Trogstad and Hoetorp forts in positions stretching in a line along the southern edge of three "finger lakes," Mjosa Randsfjord and Sperillen, which point toward Oslo.

Germans Pushing Forward

South of that line and threatening its east end, however, the Germans are pushing forward.

The Nazis are reported advancing in force north of Kongavinger, near the Swedish border, using trucks, busses and field guns and liberal quantities of machine guns.

They are believed engaged now on the Flisa river, an eastern tributary of the Glomma, in a flanking drive on Elverum, Lake village seventy-five miles north of Oslo.

Nazis Hold Kongsberg

They have captured Kongsberg, southeast o. Oslo and destroyed the broadcasting station.

Further to the south, they hold Kristiansand, Evje and Egersund, southeastern coast town which is the terminus of the cable to England.

Along the frontier east of Oslo Swedish frontier guards looked on impassively as Norwegian guards were replaced by German sentries.

Norwegian soldiers escaping across this section of the frontier mounted to 4,000.

The reports from Trondheim indicated that both German and Norwegian forces expected a battle imminently.

Swedish correspondents informed their newspapers that a Norwegian force, apparently preparing for an early attack, was massed on the inner part of Trondheim fjord, within railroad reach of Namsos, about 100 miles north, where British troops were reported to have landed.

J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press correspondent, made his way to the environs of Narvik yesterday afternoon and encountered British in

Taft Decides To Stay Out of Md. Primary Battle

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, April 18 (AP) — Senator Taft (R-O), deciding today the political cards were "stacked" against him in Maryland, let that state's sixteen Republican convention go to Thomas E. Dewey without a struggle.

Dewey, fresh from his midwestern triumphs and powerfully backed by local Maryland organizations, had virtually dared the Ohioan to make a contest of it in the coming Maryland preference primary. In the circumstances, Taft decided there was more to be gained by staying out than by going in.

But, in announcing his decision, he said that although local organizations would control the voting, a poll showed "no preponderance of sentiment" for Dewey among the public at large Tnd, noting that Dewey had entered byt five of thirteen state primaries, he said he presumed the New Yorker had stayed out of others because the local organizations were against him.

Otherwise, the day's political de-

Christian Front Leaders Said To Have Adopted Hitler's Plans

New York, April 18 (AP) — Claus Gunther Ernecke, the sedition trial defendant who removed himself from the picture by suicide, once likened the position of "leaders in the Christian Front" to that of Adolf Hitler at the time of his abortive beer-hall putsch, and FBI special agent testified today.

"If their objective failed, they'd be found dead in the gutter," agent Peter J. Wachs said Ernecke explained. "If they won, they would rule the country."

This alleged statement by Ernecke, and other details of the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the government, Wachs told a federal court jury, were overheard by him during many days and nights he eaves-dropped in the attic of a house where Denis Healy, chief prosecution witness, entertained accused plotters.

Healy, himself, engaged by the FBI to spy upon the alleged conspirators, completed eight days on the witness stand before Wachs took up the bizarre story.

"Ernecke told Healy during a conversation last September that the Christian Front had been organized to eradicate Jews from the business and professional life of the United States," Wachs declared. "He said that unless the Jews were stopped the country would be faced with a Communist revolution and the Jews would control everything."

The federal agent quoted William Gerald Bishop, one of the sixteen defendants remaining on trial, as having told Haely at another time that he had given machine gun training to about forty men.

Editors Hear FDR "Off the Record"

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Behind the closed doors of state department and White House, editors of the nation's Metropolitan press went hunting today for stories of American foreign and domestic policy which they may never print.

The newsmen, members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, went into off-the-record conferences with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles this afternoon and President Roosevelt tonight, but it was stipulated that the talks were "off the record."

Earlier, the 125 or more editors began swapping views on their own problems, discussing principally the merits of local and syndicated newspaper features and reader surveys, and heard their president, Donald S. Sterling of the Oregon Journal of Portland, tell them:

"The newspaper of late has accepted too many blows below the belt without taking a sock at the unreasoning critic who confounds news with propaganda and thereby prostitutes the very freedom of the press whose cause he professes to espouse."

Applauding Kansas City and New Orleans papers which have exposed public wrongs," Sterling asserted that the American press, in spite of financial harrassment, is still solvent and free, responsible and devoted, greater "in its scope of service," forty-two percent more widely read daily than twenty years ago and eighty-four percent more on Sunday.

Rep. Fish Charges Roosevelt Is Seeking WPA Cash for Campaign

Washington, April 18. (AP) — Signs of a fight appeared in Congress today after President Roosevelt had requested permission to spend a $975,000,000 WPA appropriation for the next fiscal year in eight months if he found it necessary to do so.

While the Democratic supporters of the administration generally applauded the suggestion, Rep. Fish (R.-N. Y.), arose on the House floor to demand. "Is this another campaign slush fund? Does it mean that another 500,000 people are going to be padded onto the rolls during September, October and November at public expense?"

Mr. Roosevelt put his request on the ground that no one had the foggiest idea at present whether the country was going to have a boom that would provide additional private employment.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, which was read to the House, he said there was certainly no information now available to justify a reduction in the WPA program below that carried on in the current fiscal year with an appropriation of approximately $1,500,000,000.

If more than $975,000,000 proved necessary to finance work relief through the final four months of next year, he said, Congress could act at its next session on this question and consider also, possibly, whether additional taxation was needed to provide the added funds.

Rep. Ditter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, told reporters that the permission asked by the President to spend the fund in eight months might, in an election year, "offer temptations that I feel certain the Democratic party would not care to deal with."

Gov. Holt Plans Radio Address Tomorrow Night

Talk To Come on Eve of Meeting of Labor's Non-Partisan League

Charleston, W. Va. April 18 (AP)—The coming weekend took on greater political importance today with the announcement that Governor Holt would speak for the "statehouse" faction of the Democratic party on the eve of the meeting of Labor's Non-Partisan League, which always has supported the "federal" wing.

While Holt did not announce a topic for his 8:30 p. m. statewide radio broadcast on Saturday night, his office said it would be "political" in nature.

Coming as it does on the night before the CIO league is scheduled to assemble in Charleston, many persons here assumbed the speech would be of such a nature to try and offset anything which the league might do concerning the candidacy of Senator M. M. Neely for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Holt has not yet mentioned his favorite publicly, but it is accepted that he wants State Chairman R. Carl Andrews to be his successor. Holt is not eligible to succeed himself.

The announcement of Holt's broadcast overshadows somewhat the start of Senator Rush D. Holt's campaign for re-election, which is scheduled for Grafton tomorrow.

Six years ago the young Weston senator went to Grafton to open the drive which culminated in his election as the youngest senator ever chosen by popular vote. He had the blessings of the United Mine Workers in that campaign—an endorsement which union leaders say emphatically he will not have this time.

Who will get that support has not been made public although it was believed that Judge Harley M. Kilgore of Beckley would do so.

Britain Landing

the blue waters of the Agean Sea, British - Italian relations became of paramount importance for the first time in months.

Some sources discounted growing Italian antagonism as mere "Sabre rattling" preparatory to new demands by Premier Mussolini for Tunis, Nice and Corsica, or other parts of the French empire, at a moment when the Allies are engaged in the North.

To support this view an Italian diplomat told one leader of London Italian colony, "don't worry—it's not war."

The less optimistic believed there was a real possibility of Italy's entrance into the war on the side of Germany. World-wide events, such as Japan's indicated interest in the Dutch East Indies, revived old British fears of a Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axes and battle fronts around the world.

However, Prime Minister Chamberlain sought to assure Commons that the allied economic and diplomatic front was being held in the Balkans.

His report on conferences with the British Ambassador to Turkey and the ministers to Yugoslavia, Greece, Hungary and Bulgaria as well as the ambassadors to Italy and Soviet Russia, came just at the time when many Balkan sources here believed Mussolini is weighing the seizure of part of Yugoslavia or Greece.

"No one o' these states," said Chamberlain, "has any cause to fear that the Allies or their forces will ever threaten their independence or integrity."

velopments concerned President Roosevelt and the still unanswered third term question. Mr. Roosevelt, himself, disclosed that he had discussed the question of who should be keynote speaker an dwho permanent chairman at the Democratic convention with Postmaster Farley at a convention on Tuesday. Candidates, however, were emphasically not mentioned, he said.

Taft's decision was, it was generally agreed, a difficult one. In announcing he would not enter such primaries as those in Illinois and Wisconsin, he said he could not spare the time from his Senate duties to campaign so far away. However, he thought nearby Maryland and West Virginia might present a different situation.

Makes Difficult Decision

Then two days ago, after lining up leaders of Maryland's political factions, Dewey entered the state's primary with an accompanying challenge to Taft to do likewise. Taft thought it over, and sought the advice of Maryland politicians.

"The vote in the Republican primary is light and will be controlled by the organizations," he said today. "x x xThe cards woul dbe stacked from the beginning, although the poll we have taken shows no preponderance of sentiment x x x for Mr. Dewey. x x x I presume he has failed to do so (file in other states) because x x xthe Republican organization was opposed to him. Kid McCoy Dies In Hotel Room; Married 9 Times

Overdose of Sleeping Medicine or Poison Cause of Death

By DALE STAFFORD

Detroit, April 18 (AP) — In the quiet of a hotel room a peaceful death came today to Norman Selby, the glamorous Kid McCoy of the boxing ring whose amazing life story would have been labeled fantastic fiction if its chapters had been woven into a novel.

McCoy who did more and saw more in his sixty-six years than the average man dares to dream about, died from either an overdose of sleeping medicine or poison, according to Dr. Lyle C. Ling, deputy coroner.

Married Nine Times

Hobo and millionaire sportsman; dishwasher and social lion; claimant of the world's middleweight title and convict; owner of an exclusive New York jewelry store and bankrupt; movie actor and saloon porter; auto racer and confidante of Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet and mystic; hero of a short story classic by Richard Harding Davis and demonstrator of a new-fangled health suspender — these descriptions all fitted the kid, who was married nine times, three times to the same woman.

One note left by McCoy said:

"I can no longer endure this world's madness."

As a boxer McCoy boasted a devastating punch but a good many of his victories were scored by cunning. The stories of how he outwitted his foes are legion and a good many of them certainly do not picture the kid in the most favorable light. In later life McCoy claimed that many of these tales were exaggerated although he admitted that he had distracted opponents by telling them their shoe laces were untied and by other ruses.

Last Job as Guard

McCoy spent his last years in Detroit as a Ford Motor Company guard, obtaining the job when he was paroled from San Quentin prison where he served a term for homicide in connection with the death of Mrs. Theresa Mors of Los Angeles.

He claimed the world middleweight title in 1896 after defeating Tommy Ryan, the champion. During his career he won seventy-five bouts, lost six, including knockouts by Jim Corbett and Tom Sharkey, drew nine times and engaged in thirteen no-decision fights. During the World War and in 1922 he boxed in several exhibitions.

Germany Claims

for German-occupied areas of his kingdom though calling it merely an administrative committee.

German troops have occupied the entire area southeast of Oslo up to the Swedish border, including all forts, three of which were taken by fighting and three by surprise. Fifty officers and 1,000 Norwegian soldiers were captured in the district while others fled into Sweden where they were interned.

A British attempt to land troops in Herjangs fjord, in the region of Narvik, the northern ore-shipping port, was repulsed yesterday. In a drive to the Swedish border, Germans captured Norwegians, among them the commander of the Bardufoss airport northeast of Narvik.

Narvik, according to statements repeated several times during the day, is in German hands.

Scuttled Destroyers

Authorized sources intimated that it was not British bravery which doomed ten German destroyers in the port of Narvik last week. Instead the Germans themselves scuttled the ships after firing their last torpedo and last grenade.

British attempts to attack Trondheim, German-held port on the west coast of Norway, from the air yesterday were said by the high command to have been "completely without success because of timely German defense."

The general staff meanwhile kept a sharp eye on developments in Sweden to meet with countermeasures any possible signs of British attempts to invade that country.

Travelers headed for Baltic states had difficulty in obtaining permission to purchase transportation because of a ban put on ordinary travel.

A fear that foreign spies in the guise of travelers might discover the nature of Germany's counter preparations in event of a British design on Sweden was believed in foreign diplomatic quarters to be the reason.

Hull's Warning To Japan Given Senate Approval

Both Republicans and Democrats OK Views of Secretary of State

Washington, April 18 (AP) — The administration's call for all nations to keep hands off the Dutch East Indies received bi-partison applause at the capitol today, mingled with some demands for amplification.

Senator Bone D-Wash) said he did not know whether it implied that the United States would go to war "if Japan should seize the islands," but that if it did, it should be made plain.

"I raise that question," he said, "because if we are going to war over the island possessions of another country we ought to know about it."

In the House, Representative Fish (R-NY) asked, "does it mean that we intend to extend the Monroe Doctrine to the East Indies? Suppose Japan seizes these islands, does that mean we have to go to war?"

Majority Behind Hull

For the most part, however, senators and representatives freely endorsed Secretary of State Hull's statement last night that any intervention in the domestic affairs of the Netherlands Indies would "directly affect" the interests of many countries" and would prejudice the "cause of stability, peace and security x x x in the entire Pacific area."

Senator Austin of Vermont, the assistant Republican leader, exapproval saying:

"We can't remain positively and entirely silent in view of swiftly changing scenes."

Questions directed to President Roosevelt at his press conference during the day elicited merely an endorsement of Secretary Hull's statement, and an expression of hope that the status quo might be maintained in the whole Pacific.

Norway Proclaims Independence of Pro-Nazi Regime

Proclamation Oslo Group Does Not Represent People

Stockholm, April 19 (Friday) (AP)—The Norwegian legation made public a proclamation by the Norwegian government from "somewhere in Norway," today which declared the council of administration in German-occupied Oslo is "not representing the will of the Norwegian people and has no legal base in any Norwegian law."

(Authorized German sources in Berlin yesterday said King Haakon of Norway had recognized the provisional government but regarded it as merely an administrative committee.)

The proclamation, which was said to have been adopted by the cabinet council presided over by the king, said it was "good" that Major Vidkun Quisling, pro-Nazi who proclaimed a government immediately after the German occupation, had had to resign.

Declaring efforts to establish a new government against the legal Norwegian government under the king "now has been abandoned, the proclamation said "Norway now has only one government, namely, the government which has been appointed by the king and which unanimously has been asked by the Storting (Parliament) to remain in office."

Income of Corporations Up 43 Per Cent

New York, April 19 (AP)—Earnings of the first ninety corporations to report for the initial quarter of 1940 were forty-three per cent greatef than for the same period last year, an Associated Press compilation disclosed today.

Net income of the group totaled $118,052,000 compared with $82,469,000 in the first three months of 1939.

Catholic Population Set at 21,403,136

This is 3,311 fewer than 1939, the decrease beinx explained by a revision of the figures for the diocese fo Brooklyn.

J. Edgar Hoover Says Communists Challenge G-Men

Seek To "Smear" Them, Head of FBI Tells D.A.R.

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation today said that last week the Communist Party of America had issued orders to "smear" and compromise the G-men, and he added: "we accept the challenge."

Speaking at the forty-ninth annual Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Hoover replied to recent criticism of the FBI, saying:

"I charge that accuations indicating a purpose on the part of the federal bureau of investigation to become an OGPU, a Gestapo, a national police, or anything resembling such bodies, emanate, directly or indirectly, from certain anti-American bodies who hope to discredit the FBI as a step in a general plan to disrupt the entire United States or from well-meaning but misinformed persons who have fallen for the lies and utterly false information of those who would tear asunder America's machinery of law enforcement."

He continued: "such monstrosities as the OGPU and Gestapo are foreign born. They are inhuman, uncivilized and unAmerican. Any person who charges that such methods have been condoned or even considered within the FBI deliberately purveys a malignant falsehood."

Hoover told the several thousand women that "foreignisms are seeking to engulf Americanism; this must not be allowed to happen. It need not happen, for we have had ample warning."

House Puts Curb On Labor Board, Other Agencies

Passes Logan-Walter Bill In Spite of New Deal Opposition

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Overriding opposition of administration leaders, the House passed and sent to the Senate today the Logan-Walter uniform procedure bill designed to curb alleged abuses of power by such administrative agencies as the National Labor Board.

The House brushed aside fifteen amendments to narrow application of the bill by increasing the number of agencies exempted, then went on to pass it by a vote of 280 to 97.

Earlier, the members rejected, 273 to 106, the request of Acting Speaker Rayburn of Texas, the administration floor leader, to send the measure back to the House Judiciary Committee for further study.

The bill would require the government's 130-odd administrative agencies to follow a common procedure in promulgating regulations and in granting hearings to aggrieved persons and would speed up the initiation of appeals to the courts from such orders.

It would apply to all administrative agencies except a group which includes the war, navy, state and justice departments, the Federal Reserve Board, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, Federal Lending Agencies and a few others.

Communists Plan Blitzkrieg Here, Rep. Dies Asserts

Tells Newsmen Radicals Hope To Paralyze Vital Industries

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Chairman Dies (D-Tex) declared today that his committee on unAmerican activities had obtained possession of a written Communist plan to "blitzkreig the United States at the proper hour."

Dies told newsmen that the plan was obtained from Communist sources and contemplated paralyzing vital industries — like utilities, communications, transport and steel — in addition to navy yards and airplane plants.

The chairman added that the blitzkreig plan would be disclosed subsequently at a committee hearing and would show that "when the time is ripe the Communists and Nazis plan to do here what they have done in so many European countries."

Dies declared that Nazi Germany was cooperating with Soviet Russia in the undertaking. He asserted that the plan, "which we have in black and white," does not set a specific hour for quick seizure of

Trade 'Strangled' By New Deal, Says Senate Aspirant

Carl G. Bachmann, Mayor Dawson of Charleston Talk at Rally

Moundsville, W. Va., April 18 (AP)—Carl G. Bachman laid down a 10-point program for his Republican senatorial campaign tonight, while his co-speaker, Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston attacked any candidate who would seek the gubernatorial nomination as the head of "any particular faction."

Speaking at a Marshall county Republican rally, Dawson, a candidate for governor, said in a prepared text:

"I have been told that certain candidates have set themselves up as representing certain or particular interests in the state. x x x If I am elected governor of West Virginia I do not propose to represent any individual interests—oil, gas, coal, capital, farm or labor, but to fairly represent the best interests of all of the people of West Virginia, regardless of their business, union, or political affiliation."

Dawson, whose opponents are Judge Lewis H. Miller of Ripley, and Dr. D. B. Ealy of Moundsville, did not mention any names.

Bachmann, declaring the New Deal is "strangling business, keeping workers unemployed and the farmers in dire distress," proposed ten 'remedies."

First, he said, "I propose to take the government out of business and keep it out."

His second point was "do away with reciprocal trade agreements. Restore American markets to the American farmer and wage earner."

Other points were:

Return to Congress certain powers which now are in the hands of the president; put relief in state hands on a twenty-five per cent federal responsibility and a seventy-five per cent state; do away with many New Deal agencies; "encourage industry"; cut expenditures, "reject a" experimental legislation not clearly helpful in promoting recovery;" restore to Congress the authority to "go in and regulate" the value of money; and "keep the United States out of war."

Senate Approves

several weeks to seven months ahead of schedule.

The Senate heard warnings by Senator Byrnes (D-SC) and other supporters of the measure that the United States could not afford to let other nations outstrip it in naval buildings. Byrnes said he hoped that "some day" there could be limitation of armaments, adding:

"Until that day arrives, however, we can't sit back—the richest nation on earth—and leave ourselves undefended."

Creation of the 300-mile Atlantic "neutrality zone" came in for criticism from Senators Adams (D-Colo) and Norris (Ind-Neb). Apparently referring to undersecretary of state Sumner Welles, Adams criticized "the apparent presumption of some assistant secretary in trying to change international law."

Welles signed the Panama declaration creating the zone last fall.

Total appropriations in the bill were $48,437,229 more than made available for the navy this year, but still $123,514,099 under President Roosevelt's budget estimates.

As passed by the Senate, the bill included $340,371,979 for construction of surface vessels and $41,083,000 for purchase of airplanes. In addition, the navy was authorized to let plane contracts for $25,000,000.

The measure carried $1,700,000 to start work on two new battleships, expected to be of 50,000 tons or more. Also listed in the new ship category were one aircraft carrier, two cruisers, eight destroyers, six submarines and five auxiliary vessels. Additional appropriations were made to carry forward work on eight battleships, seven cruisers, two aircraft carriers, forty-two destroyers, twenty submarines and eighteen auxiliary ships now building.

Hopes to Prevent War

"Japan hopes to prevent the spread of European war to the Pacific and the step (Arita's statement on Japan's concern) was taken in accordance wtih this wish."

(In Shanghai, meanwhile, allied forces were reported to be preparing for any emergency. This preparedness, it was said, took in possible Japanese invasion of the rich East Indies, which supply both Japan and the United States with raw materials, if Germany should attack the Netherlands.

(Such a move, it was said, was considered a distinct possibility in U. S. naval circles in the far east.)

Pea Canning Is Problem

The Mount Airy Canning company may not open its cannery at Loch Lyn Heights this year for the purpose of canning peas, it has been reported, although a group of farmers have been working with officials of the company for the past two weeks or more on the problem.

Last year the canning company and farmers worked under a co-operative agreement, and it is understood the farmers received about $40 per ton for their crop. Formerly, they sold their crop under contract for as much as $52 50 or $55 per ton.

The pea growers' committee is seeking a contract price for this year's product, but as yet no agreement has been reached between it and the canning company.

About three hundred farmers of the county have produced pea crops during the past several years for the canning company.

Assumes Duties

Mrs. Dorothy Ogburn, who was recently appointed executive secretary of the Garrett County Welfare Board, has arrived here to assume her duties. Mrs Ogburn succeeds Miss Ethel Miller, who left Oakland Monday for Baltimore, where she continues her welfare work in the Baltimore office.

Mrs. Ogburn was executive secretary for Queen Anne's county and came to Oakland from Centerville. She and her eight-year-old daughter are occupying the Chance cottage at Mt. Lake Park, two miles east of here.

Attempt To Surround Nazis

What Lodge was able to see of the obscure situation there indicated that the British may be attempting a wide encircling movement to trap the Germans in the area.

Stories of how both the Norwegians and Germans suffered for lack of equipment were told here by refugees from the war zone.

Norwegian volunteers who fought at Kongsvinger and since have joined about 4,000 Norwegian soldiers now reported interned in Sweden, said they had one gun for six men. They said they drew lots, waiting in turn until the men ahead of them were shot.

Inspection of the Norwegians' guns on this side of the border disclosed no sabotage. They apparently had been taken directly from warehouses without having been cleaned, however, and were not efficient.

Allies Contract For 1,500 Speedy American Planes

Place Orders for Aircraft To Cost at Least $120,000,000

Washington, April 18, (AP)—Great Britain and France contracted tentatively today to purchase more than 1,500 speedy American warplanes expected to cost at least $120,000,000.

Reports of large-scale buying were confirmed by Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French purchasing mission, who said "huge quantities" were involved. Although he mentioned no figures, aviation experts in close touch with the negotiations said at least 1,500 planes were covered by the tentative contracts.

Described as probably the largest such purchases on record they are the first of a series of projected orders for some 4,600 aircraft of the latest type developed for the United States army and navy.

The initial contracts were for Curtiss fighting planes and for Douglas attack bombers, which Congress has been told were superior to any that have seen action thus far in the European war.

Purvis also said the Allies were about to sign contracts in New York for an unidentified third type.

Airmen estimated that deliveries of the first of the planes ordered could not be expected before fall. They thought it significant that hundreds of pursuit planes were ordered at the outset, since these are designed to cope with bombing raids.

general in charge of criminal prosecution, declined direct information on his next moves, but there were strong indications that reported political corruption in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Florida was next on the list for federal scrutiny.

The tall prosecutor's investigations are widely credited with paving the way for destruction of the late Huey Long's political machine in Louisiana and for the defeat of Governor Earl K. Long by reform candidate Sam Jones. He is here now to confer with assistants on pending trials.

Asked in an interview why Michigan, Georgia and Arkansas were under inquiry now, Rogge made no direct answer but said activity there "does not imply that all the other states are without scandal."

The new problems, said Rogge, will parallel the Louisiana inquiries, including reported corruption in public office, mail fraud, and other violations of federal statutes. He said he was increasing the number of his agents in the three states.

Gov. Holt Plans Radio Address Tomorrow Night

Talk To Come on Eve of Meeting of Labor's Non-Partisan League

Charleston, W. Va. April 18 (AP)—The coming weekend took on greater political importance today with the announcement that Governor Holt would speak for the "statehouse" faction of the Democratic party on the eve of the meeting of Labor's Non-Partisan League, which always has supported the "federal" wing.

While Holt did not announce a topic for his 8:30 p. m. statewide radio broadcast on Saturday night, his office said it would be "political" in nature.

Coming as it does on the night before the CIO league is scheduled to assemble in Charleston, many persons here assumbed the speech would be of such a nature to try and offset anything which the league might do concerning the candidacy of Senator M. M. Neely for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Holt has not yet mentioned his favorite publicly, but it is accepted that he wants State Chairman R. Carl Andrews to be his successor. Holt is not eligible to succeed himself.

The announcement of Holt's broadcast overshadows somewhat the start of Senator Rush D. Holt's campaign for re-election, which is scheduled for Grafton tomorrow.

Six years ago the young Weston senator went to Grafton to open the drive which culminated in his election as the youngest senator ever chosen by popular vote. He had the blessings of the United Mine Workers in that campaign—an endorsement which union leaders say emphatically he will not have this time.

Who will get that support has not been made public although it was believed that Judge Harley M. Kilgore of Beckley would do so.

Britain Landing

the blue waters of the Agean Sea, British - Italian relations became of paramount importance for the first time in months.

Some sources discounted growing Italian antagonism as mere "Sabre rattling" preparatory to new demands by Premier Mussolini for Tunis, Nice and Corsica, or other parts of the French empire, at a moment when the Allies are engaged in the North.

To support this view an Italian diplomat told one leader of London Italian colony, "don't worry—it's not war."

The less optimistic believed there was a real possibility of Italy's entrance into the war on the side of Germany. World-wide events, such as Japan's indicated interest in the Dutch East Indies, revived old British fears of a Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axes and battle fronts around the world.

However, Prime Minister Chamberlain sought to assure Commons that the allied economic and diplomatic front was being held in the Balkans.

His report on conferences with the British Ambassador to Turkey and the ministers to Yugoslavia, Greece, Hungary and Bulgaria as well as the ambassadors to Italy and Soviet Russia, came just at the time when many Balkan sources here believed Mussolini is weighing the seizure of part of Yugoslavia or Greece.

"No one o' these states," said Chamberlain, "has any cause to fear that the Allies or their forces will ever threaten their independence or integrity."

Taft Decides

velopments concerned President Roosevelt and the still unanswered third term question. Mr. Roosevelt, himself, disclosed that he had discussed the question of who should be keynote speaker an dwho permanent chairman at the Democratic convention with Postmaster Farley at a convention on Tuesday. Candidates, however, were emphasically not mentioned, he said.

Taft's decision was, it was generally agreed, a difficult one. In announcing he would not enter such primaries as those in Illinois and Wisconsin, he said he could not spare the time from his Senate duties to campaign so far away. However, he thought nearby Maryland and West Virginia might present a different situation.

Makes Difficult Decision

Then two days ago, after lining up leaders of Maryland's political factions, Dewey entered the state's primary with an accompanying challenge to Taft to do likewise. Taft thought it over, and sought the advice of Maryland politicians.

"The vote in the Republican primary is light and will be controlled by the organizations," he said today. "x x xThe cards woul dbe stacked from the beginning, although the poll we have taken shows no preponderance of sentiment x x x for Mr. Dewey. x x x I presume he has failed to do so (file in other states) because x x xthe Republican organization was opposed to him. Kid McCoy Dies In Hotel Room; Married 9 Times

By DALE STAFFORD

Detroit, April 18 (AP) — In the quiet of a hotel room a peaceful death came today to Norman Selby, the glamorous Kid McCoy of the boxing ring whose amazing life story would have been labeled fantastic fiction if its chapters had been woven into a novel.

McCoy who did more and saw more in his sixty-six years than the average man dares to dream about, died from either an overdose of sleeping medicine or poison, according to Dr. Lyle C. Ling, deputy coroner.

Married Nine Times

Hobo and millionaire sportsman; dishwasher and social lion; claimant of the world's middleweight title and convict; owner of an exclusive New York jewelry store and bankrupt; movie actor and saloon porter; auto racer and confidante of Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet and mystic; hero of a short story classic by Richard Harding Davis and demonstrator of a new-fangled health suspender — these descriptions all fitted the kid, who was married nine times, three times to the same woman.

One note left by McCoy said:

"I can no longer endure this world's madness."

As a boxer McCoy boasted a devastating punch but a good many of his victories were scored by cunning. The stories of how he outwitted his foes are legion and a good many of them certainly do not picture the kid in the most favorable light. In later life McCoy claimed that many of these tales were exaggerated although he admitted that he had distracted opponents by telling them their shoe laces were untied and by other ruses.

Last Job as Guard

McCoy spent his last years in Detroit as a Ford Motor Company guard, obtaining the job when he was paroled from San Quentin prison where he served a term for homicide in connection with the death of Mrs. Theresa Mors of Los Angeles.

He claimed the world middleweight title in 1896 after defeating Tommy Ryan, the champion. During his career he won seventy-five bouts, lost six, including knockouts by Jim Corbett and Tom Sharkey, drew nine times and engaged in thirteen no-decision fights. During the World War and in 1922 he boxed in several exhibitions.

Germany Claims

for German-occupied areas of his kingdom though calling it merely an administrative committee.

German troops have occupied the entire area southeast of Oslo up to the Swedish border, including all forts, three of which were taken by fighting and three by surprise. Fifty officers and 1,000 Norwegian soldiers were captured in the district while others fled into Sweden where they were interned.

A British attempt to land troops in Herjangs fjord, in the region of Narvik, the northern ore-shipping port, was repulsed yesterday. In a drive to the Swedish border Germans captured Norwegians, among them the commander of the Bardufoss airport northeast of Narvik.

Narvik, according to statements repeated several times during the day, is in German hands.

Scuttled Destroyers

Authorized sources intimated that it was not British bravery which doomed ten German destroyers in the port of Narvik last week. Instead the Germans themselves scuttled the ships after firing their last torpedo and last grenade.

British attempts to attack Trondheim, German-held port on the west coast of Norway, from the air yesterday were said by the high command to have been "completely without success because of timely German defense."

The general staff meanwhile kept a sharp eye on developments in Sweden to meet with countermeasures any possible signs of British attempts to invade that country.

Travelers headed for Baltic states had difficulty in obtaining permission to purchase transportation because of a ban put on ordinary travel.

A fear that foreign spies in the guise of travelers might discover the nature of Germany's counter preparations in event of a British design on Sweden was believed in foreign diplomatic quarters to be the reason.

Hull's Warning To Japan Given Senate Approval

Both Republicans and Democrats OK Views of Secretary of State

Washington, April 18 (AP) — The administration's call for all nations to keep hands off the Dutch East Indies received bi-partison applause at the capitol today, mingled with some demands for amplification.

Senator Bone D-Wash) said he did not know whether it implied that the United States would go to war "if Japan should seize the islands," but that if it did, it should be made plain.

"I raise that question," he said, "because if we are going to war over the island possessions of another country we ought to know about it."

In the House, Representative Fish (R-NY) asked, "does it mean that we intend to extend the Monroe Doctrine to the East Indies? Suppose Japan seizes these islands, does that mean we have to go to war?"

Majority Behind Hull

For the most part, however, senators and representatives freely endorsed Secretary of State Hull's statement last night that any intervention in the domestic affairs of the Netherlands Indies would "directly affect" the interests of many countries" and would prejudice the "cause of stability, peace and security x x x in the entire Pacific area."

Senator Austin of Vermont, the assistant Republican leader, exapproval saying:

"We can't remain positively and entirely silent in view of swiftly changing scenes."

Questions directed to President Roosevelt at his press conference during the day elicited merely an endorsement of Secretary Hull's statement, and an expression of hope that the status quo might be maintained in the whole Pacific.

Norway Proclaims Independence of Pro-Nazi Regime

Proclamation Oslo Group Does Not Represent People

Stockholm, April 19 (Friday) (AP)—The Norwegian legation made public a proclamation by the Norwegian government from "somewhere in Norway," today which declared the council of administration in German-occupied Oslo is "not representing the will of the Norwegian people and has no legal base in any Norwegian law."

(Authorized German sources in Berlin yesterday said King Haakon of Norway had recognized the provisional government but regarded it as merely an administrative committee.)

The proclamation, which was said to have been adopted by the cabinet council presided over by the king, said it was "good" that Major Vidkun Quisling, pro-Nazi who proclaimed a government immediately after the German occupation, had had to resign.

Declaring efforts to establish a new government against the legal Norwegian government under the king "now has been abandoned," the proclamation said "Norway now has only one government, namely, the government which has been appointed by the king and which unanimously has been asked by the Storting (Parliament) to remain in office."

Income of Corporations Up 43 Per Cent

New York, April 19 (AP)—Earnings of the first ninety corporations to report for the initial quarter of 1940 were forty-three per cent greater than for the same period last year, an Associated Press compilation disclosed today.

Net income of the group totaled $118,052,000 compared with $82,469,000 in the first three months of 1939.

Catholic Population Set at 21,403,136

New York, April 18 (AP)—A Roman Catholic population of 21,403,136 for the United States Alaska and the Hawaiian islands was reported in "the official Catholic directory" for 1940 issued today by P. J. Kenedy & Sons, New York.

This is 3,311 fewer than 1939, the decrease beinx explained by a revision of the figures for the diocese fo Brooklyn.

Washington, April 18 (AP)—The Postal Telegraph Company has received a $5,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Jessine Jones, federal load administrator, said today. J. Edgar Hoover Says Communists Challenge G-Men

Seek To "Smear" Them, Head of FBI Tells D.A.R.

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation today said that last week the Communist Party of America had issued orders to "smear" and compromise the G-men, and he added: "we accept the challenge."

Speaking at the forty-ninth annual Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Hoover replied to recent criticism of the FBI, saying:

"I charge that accuations indicating a purpose on the part of the federal bureau of investigation to become an OGPU, a Gestapo, a national police, or anything resembling such bodies, emanate, directly or indirectly, from certain anti-American bodies who hope to discredit the FBI as a step in a general plan to disrupt the entire United States or from well-meaning but misinformed persons who have fallen for the lies and utterly false information of those who would tear asunder America's machinery of law enforcement."

He continued: "such monstrosities as the OGPU and Gestapo are foreign born. They are inhuman, uncivilized and unAmerican. Any person who charges that such methods have been condoned or even considered within the FBI deliberately purveys a malignant falsehood."

Hoover told the several thousand women that "foreignisms are seeking to engulf Americanism; this must not be allowed to happen. It need not happen, for we have had ample warning."

House Puts Curb On Labor Board, Other Agencies

Passes Logan-Walter Bill In Spite of New Deal Opposition

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Overriding opposition of administration leaders, the House passed and sent to the Senate today the Logan-Walter uniform procedure bill designed to curb alleged abuses of power by such administrative agencies as the National Labor Board.

The House brushed aside fifteen amendments to narrow application of the bill by increasing the number of agencies exempted, then went on to pass it by a vote of 280 to 97.

Earlier, the members rejected, 273 to 106, the request of Acting Speaker Rayburn of Texas, the administration floor leader, to send the measure back to the House Judiciary Committee for further study.

The bill would require the government's 130-odd administrative agencies to follow a common procedure in promulgating regulations and in granting hearings to aggrieved persons and would speed up the initiation of appeals to the courts from such orders.

It would apply to all administrative agencies except a group which includes the war, navy, state and justice departments, the Federal Reserve Board, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, Federal Lending Agencies and a few others.

Communists Plan Blitzkrieg Here, Rep. Dies Asserts

Tells Newsmen Radicals Hope To Paralyze Vital Industries

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Chairman Dies (D-Tex) declared today that his committee on unAmerican activities had obtained possession of a written Communist plan to "blitzkreig the United States at the proper hour."

Dies told newsmen that the plan was obtained from Communist sources and contemplated paralyzing vital industries — like utilities, communications, transport and steel — in addition to navy yards and airplane plants.

The chairman added that the blitzkreig plan would be disclosed subsequently at a committee hearing and would show that "when the time is ripe the Communists and Nazis plan to do here what they have done in so many European countries."

Dies declared that Nazi Germany was cooperating with Soviet Russia in the undertaking. He asserted that the plan, "which we have in black and white," does not set a specific hour for quick seizure of

Trade 'Strangled' By New Deal, Says Senate Aspirant

Carl G. Bachmann, Mayor Dawson of Charleston Talk at Rally

Moundsville, W. Va., April 18 (AP)—Carl G. Bachman laid down a 10-point program for his Republican senatorial campaign tonight, while his co-speaker, Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston attacked any candidate who would seek the gubernatorial nomination as the head of "any particular faction."

Speaking at a Marshall county Republican rally, Dawson, a candidate for governor, said in a prepared text:

"I have been told that certain candidates have set themselves up as representing certain or particular interests in the state. x x x If I am elected governor of West Virginia I do not propose to represent any individual interests—oil, gas, coal, capital, farm or labor, but to fairly represent the best interests of all of the people of West Virginia, regardless of their business, union, or political affiliation."

Dawson, whose opponents are Judge Lewis H. Miller of Ripley, and Dr. D. B. Ealy of Moundsville, did not mention any names.

Bachmann, declaring the New Deal is "strangling business, keeping workers unemployed and the farmers in dire distress," proposed ten 'remedies."

First, he said, "I propose to take the government out of business and keep it out."

His second point was "do away with reciprocal trade agreements. Restore American markets to the American farmer and wage earner."

Other points were:

Return to Congress certain powers which now are in the hands of the president; put relief in state hands on a twenty-five per cent federal responsibility and a seventy-five per cent state; do away with many New Deal agencies; "encourage industry"; cut expenditures, "reject a" experimental legislation not clearly helpful in promoting recovery;" restore to Congress the authority to "go in and regulate" the value of money; and "keep the United States out of war."

Senate Approves

several weeks to seven months ahead of schedule.

The Senate heard warnings by Senator Byrnes (D-SC) and other supporters of the measure that the United States could not afford to let other nations outstrip it in naval buildings. Byrnes said he hoped that "some day" there could be limitation of armaments, adding:

"Until that day arrives, however, we can't sit back—the richest nation on earth—and leave ourselves undefended."

Creation of the 300-mile Atlantic "neutrality zone" came in for criticism from Senators Adams (D-Colo) and Norris (Ind-Neb). Apparently referring to undersecretary of state Sumner Welles, Adams criticized "the apparent presumption of some assistant secretary in trying to change international law."

Welles signed the Panama declaration creating the zone last fall.

Total appropriations in the bill were $48,437,229 more than made available for the navy this year, but still $123,514,099 under President Roosevelt's budget estimates.

As passed by the Senate, the bill included $340,371,979 for construction of surface vessels and $41,083,000 for purchase of airplanes. In addition, the navy was authorized to let plane contracts for $25,000,000.

The measure carried $1,700,000 to start work on two new battleships, expected to be of 50,000 tons or more. Also listed in the new ship category were one aircraft carrier, two cruisers, eight destroyers, six submarines and five auxiliary vessels. Additional appropriations were made to carry forward work on eight battleships, seven cruisers, two aircraft carriers, forty-two destroyers, twenty submarines and eighteen auxiliary ships now building.

that the Dutch government neither had sought nor would seek foreign protection or intervention. Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, said:

Hopes to Prevent War

"Japan hopes to prevent the spread of European war to the Pacific and the step (Arita's statement on Japan's concern) was taken in accordance wtih this wish."

(In Shanghai, meanwhile, allied forces were reported to be preparing for any emergency. This preparedness, it was said, took in possible Japanese invasion of the rich East Indies, which supply both Japan and the United States with raw materials, if Germany should attack the Netherlands.

(Such a move, it was said, was considered a distinct possibility in U. S. naval circles in the far east.)

Pea Canning Is Problem

The Mount Airy Canning company may not open its cannery at Loch Lyn Heights this year for the purpose of canning peas, it has been reported, although a group of farmers have been working with officials of the company for the past two weeks or more on the problem.

Last year the canning company and farmers worked under a co-operative agreement, and it is understood the farmers received about $40 per ton for their crop. Formerly, they sold their crop under contract for as much as $52.50 or $55 per ton.

The pea growers' committee is seeking a contract price for this year's product, but as yet no agreement has been reached between it and the canning company.

About three hundred farmers of the county have produced pea crops during the past several years for the canning company.

Assumes Duties

Mrs. Dorothy Ogburn, who was recently appointed executive secretary of the Garrett County Welfare Board, has arrived here to assume her duties. Mrs Ogburn succeeds Miss Ethel Miller, who left Oakland Monday for Baltimore, where she continues her welfare work in the Baltimore office.

Mrs. Ogburn was executive secretary for Queen Anne's county and came to Oakland from Centerville. She and her eight-year-old daughter are occupying the Chance cottage at Mt. Lake Park, two miles east of here.

Attempt To Surround Nazis

What Lodge was able to see of the obscure situation there indicated that the British may be attempting a wide encircling movement to trap the Germans in the area.

Stories of how both the Norwegians and Germans suffered for lack of equipment were told here by refugees from the war zone.

Norwegian volunteers who fought at Kongsvinger and since have joined about 4,000 Norwegian soldiers now reported interned in Sweden, said they had one gun for six men. They said they drew lots, waiting in turn until the men ahead of them were shot.

Inspection of the Norwegians' guns on this side of the border disclosed no sabotage. They apparently had been taken directly from warehouses without having been cleaned, however, and were not efficient.

Allies Contract For 1,500 Speedy American Planes

Place Orders for Aircraft To Cost at Least $120,000,000

Washington, April 18, (AP)—Great Britain and France contracted tentatively today to purchase more than 1,500 speedy American warplanes expected to cost at least $120,000,000.

Reports of large-scale buying were confirmed by Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French purchasing mission, who said "huge quantities" were involved. Although he mentioned no figures, aviation experts in close touch with the negotiations said at least 1,500 planes were covered by the tentative contracts.

Described as probably the largest such purchases on record they are the first of a series of projected orders for some 4,600 aircraft of the latest type developed for the United States army and navy.

The initial contracts were for Curtiss fighting planes and for Douglas attack bombers, which Congress has been told were superior to any that have seen action thus far in the European war.

Purvis also said the Allies were about to sign contracts in New York for an unidentified third type.

Airmen estimated that deliveries of the first of the planes ordered could not be expected before fall. They thought it significant that hundreds of pursuit planes were ordered at the outset, since these are designed to cope with bombing raids.

general in charge of criminal prosecution, declined direct information on his next moves, but there were strong indications that reported political corruption in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Florida was next on the list for federal scrutiny.

The tall prosecutor's investigations are widely credited with paving the way for destruction of the late Huey Long's political machine in Louisiana and for the defeat of Governor Earl K. Long by reform candidate Sam Jones. He is here now to confer with assistants on pending trials.

Asked in an interview why Michigan, Georgia and Arkansas were under inquiry now, Rogge made no direct answer but said activity there "does 'not imply that all the other states are without scandal."

The new problems, said Rogge, will parallel the Louisiana inquiries, including reported corruption in public office, mail fraud, and other violations of federal statutes. He said he was increasing the number of his agents in the three states.

The Far East Gets The War Jitters

THE WAR JITTERS have spread into the Far East with a lot of worry being cooked up about possible Japanese attempts to seize control of the Netherlands East Indies.

The islands are immediately south of the Philippines, and as that would bring the war closer to this nation, much concern is being felt by our diplomatic representatives in that part of the world and by our naval men, as well as those who carry the belief that we are sure to be dragged into this war whether we want to be dragged or not.

But it is to be remembered that a lot of warnings and hullabaloos and scares about this war have come into public notice at various times that have never amounted to anything. Perhaps in this instance, as some observers note, the Japanese are merely putting up a "trial balloon," to ascertain just how far it could go without incurring intervention by other powers.

But, as the Manila Daily Bulletin has observed, "it is inconceivable that the United States would consider going to war to protect the rubber and tin supply of the Netherlands East Indies." It adds that while America is vitally concerned in the peace in that part of the world, "American guardianship is only for the territory over which the American flag flies."

That is about the size of it.

Germ of Hopeful Portent Is Seen in Scandinavia

THE SITUATION in and around Scandinavia is changing too rapidly to permit of any intelligent appraisal until the smoke has cleared, but the number of German ships destroyed by the British navy and the landing of an expeditionary force by the Allies seem to contain at least the germ of hopeful portent.

It seems clear that whatever else may happen, the Germans will find it impossible to get iron ore from Sweden for some time to come.

Even the capture of Denmark is not an unmixed advantage for Germany. It is true that Denmark ships a vast amount of dairy and hog products, but perhaps it is not generally realized that most of the feed to fatten these cows and pigs has to be brought from the outside. Much of it was shipped in from Great Britain.

Thus it appears that while the Nazis will be able to replenish their larder temporarily by confiscating Danish supplies and putting the Danes themselves on half rations, the time will soon come when Denmark will be a liability rather than an asset.

It is possible that the Germans in their desperation will attempt to invade Sweden, but the blitzkrieg is over. All Scandinavia is on guard and has taken such precautions as are possible. And an Allied expeditionary force is on the way.

It seems possible that Nazi desperation will next turn to the Balkans, but even there they will get no iron ore.

Soil Bacteria Development Holds Big Possibilities

FROM THE SOIL comes life; from it, death. From it can come ailment, and from it remedy.

Dr. Rene J. Dubos, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, has isolated from soil bacteria powerful chemicals which can be used as antidotes to such deadly germs as streptococci and others which prey upon mankind.

Starting with the simple proposition that the micro-organisms in the soil have a hand in giving life, Dr. Dubos watched how those same bugs destroy a thing after it is dead. This destruction is done by soil bacteria through the manufacture of chemicals which consume by digesting the substance attacked. The bacteria are countless and so are the chemical compounds they concoct. Those chemical compounds make war on microbes pestering mankind.

There is a chance that there is a soil bacteria chemical compound for every human ill arising from germ attack. Dr. Dubos demonstrated at the annual congress of the American College of Physicians the other day at Cleveland that he had isolated one chemical which he calls "gramcidin" of such activity that one one-hundredth of a milligram of it is sufficient to kill 1,000,000,000 pneumonia germs or streptococci within two hours at 37 degrees Centigrade.

Constructive Remedies Are Offered by Candidates

A FAVORITE SUBTERFUGE of New Deal supporters in attempting to answer some of the many charges of failure and mismanagement made against the Washington administration is that nothing constructive is suggested at the same time. Candidate Dewey has been the victim of such evasive criticism.

But Dewey has been coming along almost day after day confounding that dodge by proffering definite remedial suggestions, and it can be said that other Republican candidates are likewise doing the same thing.

For example, this newspaper has just commented on Dewey's remarks as to the manner in which the Roosevelt administration has been strafing business, both big and little. But in so noting, the candidate has offered remedial measures quite to the point. There are seven specific things he would do, and which should be done.

The first of these would be to "stop government policies that discourage the job-making business life of the nation." Other steps include a stopover of bureaucratic interference with the management of honest business, the placing of experience, ability and fair play in regulatory bodies; redesigning the tax structure so it will no longer drive money into the bomb-proof shelters; improving credit facilities for small business; putting an end to government policies of defeatism, of ill-conceived experiments, of frantic improvising in domestic and foreign affairs; learning the difference between stopping abuses and grabbing power; and learning again the difference between government by law and government by men.

These steps are direly needed and the sooner they are taken the better.

War and Names In Two States

A COLUMNIST in a Charleston, W. Va., newspaper, the Daily Mail, observes that if the United States should be drawn into the European holacaust, West Virginia could and would furnish a full quota for the army, adding that some of them would come from such places as War and War Eagle, Barracksville and Garrison.

The Parkersburg Sentinel in the same state notes that the state has other communities with warlike names, there being six Forts, namely, Fort Ashby, Fort Neal, Fort Run, Fort Seybert, Fort Gay and Fort Spring.

But just to prove that there is nothing after all in a name, the Parkersburg editor observes that the makings of good soldiers might be found in such places as Friendly, Goodwill, Harmony and Prudence, all towns in the state. But for real fighters, fit to make a blitzkrieg of the war, it is suggested that the recruiting officers could look to Whirlwind, Tornado and Hurricane.

Maryland does not come in for so many warlike town and community names, although it has its quota of Forts, these being Fort Howard in Baltimore county, Fort Hoyle in Harford, Fort Washington in Prince George's, and Fort Friendship in Anne Arundel. There are also some Forts not towns, such as Fort Cumberland here and Fort Frederick in Frederick county. The nearest this state comes to warlike community names otherwise is in Garrison in Baltimore county and possibly in Germantown in Montgomery and Chase in Baltimore county; but there is a Friendsville in Garret, a Friendship in Anne Arundel and an East Friendship in Howard.

All of which is another reminder that a rose by any other name smells as sweet.

Stamp Sticking Is Now A Hundred Years Old

OVER THE WORLD the followers of the foremost of all hobbies—stamp collecting—are helping the public generally to note that the adhesive postage stamp is now completing its hundredth year.

Probably no one thing of its size has ever exceeded in importance the postage stamp. Letters were as old as the hills a century ago. But because of the expense of the post comparatively few people wrote them. When the railroad came personal correspondence multiplied. The British post under this increase was in a deplorable state.

Rowland Hill, a business man, conceived a penny (two cents) charge for an ounce of mail, payable in advance. This payment was at first evidenced by a decorated sheet of writing paper. This failed of popularity.

The adhesive postage stamp which quickly supplanted the sheet was instantly accepted. The stamp did not stick very well. There was a hot debate whether it was safe to let the postmaster stick it on. He might pocket the patron's money and not buy the stamp.

At the start it never occurred to any one that the patron could stamp his own letters. But once the patron demonstrated that he could do it all over the world postmasters thereafter indignantly declined to lick any more stamps themselves.

A New York publisher reports that researchers for his firm have found that single women enjoy fiction more than married women and why shouldn't they? Married women hear so much of it, it kind of loses its zing.

Little Boy with a Knife

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The little boy who is not-quite-seven looked at me as though he couldn't quite believe his ears. His eye open wide, he grinned joyously, he shouted, "A knife! A knife for ME! A real knife!" . . . And then he reached out and took that inexpensive pocket knife and held it in his hand as though it were the most precious thing in all the world.

Marshall Maslin

And perhaps it was. Perhaps there is no more wonderful moment in a small boy's life than that moment when his father decides he is old enough to have a knife all his own and brings it home to him and surprises him with the knife he had only wistfully dreamed of possessing. . . . So little Master Not-Quite-Seven asked how it opened, and asked if it was "really sharp" and heard his father warn him not to cut anything around the house and not to run with it open in his hand and was quiet for a few moments and then said very proudly indeed:

"Do you know, Daddy—there isn't another kid in the whole first grade that has a knife of his own? Gee!"

So he took his knife and put it in his pocket—the pocket with the zipper fastener on it—and went outside, hoping there'd be another "kid" outside he could show his treasure to. . . . And I looked out the window a few minutes later and saw him wandering around in a daze, looking at the fence post, and looking at a tree about five inches through and looking at the wall of the garage—and before he could put that knife to work I told him he'd find some pieces of wood behind the garage and he'd better try his 'prentice hand on that.

Which is exactly what he did. . . . And before he went to bed he'd already started work on a boat that would probably be the best boat any kid ever made, Daddy. Even in his bath he was carving on that boat—and I had to admit it was a very fine sea-going vessel. . . . And when I went in to see Mr. Not-Quite-Seven at 11 o'clock, before I myself went to bed, there he was lying like the little angel he isn't—and one hand was twisted around so that his fist was under the pillow—and in that small fist was his wonderful twenty-five cent knife.

And I envied my small boy the great happiness that was his, and was glad I was a father. Because one of the great joys of parenthood is seeing a young thing live for the first time the experiences that were ours in that long, long ago.

Fall of Napoleon Suggests Parallel

Edwin C. Hill

Arresting comparisons and analogies are being made with respect to the Austrian housepainter and army corporal who became the ruler of eighty million people and the commander-in-chief of a mighty army, and the Corsican corporal who emerged by sheer genius from bitter poverty to build an empire as great as Rome's—Herr Hitler of Vienna, Mr. Bonaparte of Corsica.

Such comparisons and analogies are often misleading and fallacious. Despite many wise saws to the contrary, history does not repeat itself. But it is true that, since Napoleon's day, Fate has not erupted a personality, a force, a cunning, such as that which has been demonstrated by the German dictator. And there does exist certain interesting similarities.

Alike in Many Things

Both originated in poverty and obscurity. Both held, in youth, a non-commissioned rank. Both turned against revolutions which had produced republics. Both transformed these republics into empires. Both were held to be mystics. Both were noted for swift, decisive action. Both practiced the celebrated military maxim of the Confederate General Forrest, "Get there fustest with the mostest."

Both made an alliance with Russia and for identical reasons—fear and hatred of Great Britain. In Napoleon's case the Russian alliance was not only a blunder, it was a ruinous blunder. It may well turn out so in Herr Hitler's case. Neither could endure opposition and burst into explosive rages on any such provocation. Each had his familiars. Hitler's Himmler corresponds to Napoleon's chief of secret police, Fouche. Hitler's von Ribbentrop may be compared to a much greater man, Napoleon's Talleyrand. One could evince many such parallels.

Hugo Recalled

Will Hitler last? Scarcely a day passes that this question does not crop up in the mail? Who knows? But there does come to mind a chapter of "Les Miserables". It was Victor Hugo who wrote, in one of the greatest and most human novels that ever was forged in the fires of genius, this apostrophe of the fall of Napoleon. It was not the sunken road of Ohain, which engulfed the charging and otherwise irresistible heavy cavalry of the great Marshal Nevy; it was not the failure of Grouchy to arrive before Blucher. It was not the pain and faintness of developing cancer overcoming him at the moment when his superlative genius was needed—not any of these causes was responsible for his defeat at Waterloo.

Not in the Law

"Was it possible," said Victor Hugo, "that Napoleon should win this battle? We answer no. Why? Because of Wellington? Because of Blucher. No. Because of God. For Bonaparte to be conqueror at Waterloo was not in the law of the Nineteenth century.

"Another series of facts were preparing in which Napoleon had no place. The ill-will of events had long been announced. It was time that this vast man should fall. The excessive weight of this man in human destiny disturbed the equilibrium. This individual counted, of himself alone, more than the universe besides. These plethoras of all human vitality concentrated in a single head, the world mounting to the brain of one man, would be fatal to civilization if they should endure. The moment had come for incorruptible supreme equity to look to it.

Formidable Pleaders

"Probably the principles and elements upon which regular gravitations in the moral order as well as in the material depend, began to murmur. Reeking blood, overcrowded cemeteries, weeping mothers—these are formidable pleaders. When the earth is suffering from a surcharg, there are mysterious moanings from the deeps which the heavens hear. Napoleon had been impeached before the Infinite, and his fall was decreed. He vexed God. Waterloo is not a battle; it is the change of front of the universe."—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The War on Cancer

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

The national crusade this month to acquaint the public with the known facts about cancer—a crusade in which Morgantown and Monongalia county are joining—is faced right at the beginning with two attitudes which are difficult to overcome.

The first attitude is: "It can't happen to me."

The second is: "If it does happen to me, there is nothing to be done about it."

As to the first attitude, it ought to be a sufficient answer to say that cancer is now the second largest pathological cause of death in the nation. "It can happen" to anybody, and "is happening" to an increasingly large number.

As to the second attitude, these facts are presented by the American Society for Control of Cancer. The disease is not incurable in its early stages. It is always fatal if left untreated. It is not due to a germ and is therefore not contagious. It is not cured by any known diet, serum, or medicine. It is not accompanied by pain in its first stages except in bone cancer. Cancer is a rapidly growing tissue growth serving no useful purpose. It is not caused by worry, modern refrigeration, metal utensils, alcohol, or immoral practices.

At the present state of medical knowledge, the best weapon in the fight on cancer is regular physical examinations to detect the malady in its early and curable stage.

The spread of information on this disease and on its treatment is designed to encourage early diagnosis of any possible symptoms in order to catch more cases in the curable stage.

THEY PLAN G. O. P. CONVENTION

James Torrance John Hamilton Harold Mason

These three are making plans for the Republican national convention which will open in Philadelphia June 24. They are: James F. Torrance, left, chairman of the Pennsylvania Republican state committee; John D. M. Hamilton, center, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Harold Mason, right, secretary of the Republican national committee.

THAT SUSPICIOUS LOOKING PROWLER

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, April 18.—If it were possible to isolate our domestic politics from the war, the domestic situation would be simple. It is illustrated by the status of two measures now before the House—the Walter-Logan bill to restrain the New Deal alphabetical agencies and the proposed amending of the National Labor Relations act.

Mark Sullivan

To understand the present stage, go back to the beginning. The time was early 1937, when President Roosevelt sent his court measure to Congress, and there arose a wave of "sit-down" strikes, which the administration condoned. Those two events marked the beginning of a tide away from the New Deal. The tide became conspicuous in the elections of November 1938. In those elections every Democrat whom Mr. Roosevelt had attempted to purge, was returned to the Senate; some radical New Dealers, notably Congressman Maury Maverick, lost their seats; the Republicans almost doubled their membership of the House, from ninety to 169.

A Check at Least

The new Congress then elected—it was the same Congress now sitting—met in January 1939. It was, if not an anti-New Deal Congress, at least a "check the New Deal" one. Since this Congress first sat it can almost be said to have passed no measure that was an advance of the New Deal. (Re-enactment of the trade pacts was just that, a re-enactment, not an advance; besides, that was a Hull victory—which is not quite the same thing as a New Deal victory.) On the other hand, this Congress passed many measures which trimmed down the New Deal. It repealed the undistributed surplus tax; it reorganized WPA and lopped off some of its functions, such as the Federal Theatre project. By an action so unprecedented as to be flagrant, it refused to entertain a "spend-lend" proposal Mr. Roosevelt had sent to it.

Faced by this condition, the New Deal, since January 1939, has been fighting a rear-guard battle. Whenever the New Dealers amend a pending measure so as to make it less drastic, that is a New Deal victory. If they prevent a measure from passing, that is a battle won. Rarely or never can they prevent a measure from passing by a straight frontal fight, by registering a majority on a roll-call. Most of their victories are victories of postponement, won by "stalling."

Unusual Step Prompted

When the new Congress met in January 1939 it was recognized that one of its most important revisions of the New Deal would be to amend the National Labor Relations act. There was a majority ready to do it. Steps toward it began at once. But it happened that on the New Deal, Consequently, action on the Labor act was deferred; hearings were postponed again and again. A reason was that the two wings of labor, AFL and CIO, were in process of attempts to unite, and that action on the Labor Act should await their union. After several months, the delay of the Labor committee of the House gave rise to an extraordinary action. The House, taking the matter out of the Labor committee's jurisdiction, set up a special committee to investigate the Labor board.

As a result of the hearings by this special committee, several amendments to the Labor act are now before the House. Some of these amendments express the views of those who really want to amend the act; other amendments are put forward as a compromise, in the spirit of what is now the New Deal strategy, to accept something mild, in order to avoid having something drastic forced on them.

It is much the same with the Walter-Logan bill, to require the New Deal alphabetical agencies to submit the orders they issue, the regulations they make, to review by a judicial body. This bill, when introduced in the Senate last year, passed without a dissenting vote. Upon appeal by some New Dealers that they had been taken unawares, the Senate put the measure back on the calendar. Meantime, in the House, the bill, going through the usual routine, came up for action this week.

Expediency Slows Pace

It is generally felt that, regardless of what the House might do on both the Walter-Logan bill and the Labor act amendments, the Senate would not act upon them. For this, a reason is that the time is short. But there is a broader reason. The pace of the movement to restrain the New Deal has slowed down somewhat, not because of any resurgence of liking for the New Deal, but because of expediency. Democrats opposed to the New Deal are obliged to take account of the possibility that Mr. Roosevelt may again be the party's candidate for president. They are willing to postpone the surgical operation on the New Deal until after the election.

The Republicans, likewise, are as willing as not to have the measures restraining the New Deal go over until after the election. They feel that the New Deal as it stands, in its original farreaching forms, is a better asset to the Republicans in the coming election than if it were modified now. They feel, and conservative Democrats also, that the Congress to be elected next November will be even more anti-New Deal than the present one; that the Congress which meets next January will be the body to give a really thorough overhauling to the New Deal.

Quotable Quotes

Very often it happens that in any governmental bureaus which are given great powers, at the beginning those powers are handled or used with the greatest diligence, energy and honesty. Later on, in the course of time, we must expect in a bureaucracy that corruption and lack of diligence will develop * * * I think history clearly reveals that at intermittent periods great power given to government bodies is abused, and such bodies become corrupt. I do not think we can escape the workings of that historic law.

War Status Foggy, Johnson Says

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh S. Johnson

Washington, April 18.—This is an open season on military experts. Some who have recently blossomed from obscure professional beginnings have gotten far out on a limb that has later on been sawed off behind them by the progress of events. Although the government has tried to pound into me some military education, by the expenditure of a good many dollars and the gift of a considerable experience, I still fear to rush where angels do not tread.

In the military art, the "fog of war" is supposed to give some pause to the estimates of a commander who at least has the measured, deliberate and expert reports of his own military information organization. Our so-called military experts do not have these advantages. They have only censored press dispatches, what can be picked out of the air from lucky contacts with fugitive short-wave radio and propaganda laden "reports" of the belligerents themselves.

Is Getting Weary

I study these also, sit up nights sticking pins in maps and fooling with radio receiving sets, I also get professional reports so "confidential" that I cannot use them. I am getting very leary. I have started and even completed several labored columns arriving at definite conclusions about what is happening in the North and Baltic Seas, and then torn them up as pure guess or pure suckerism.

At least one thing is quite clear. They may be fighting like hell but reports from both Berlin and London are surely lying like hell. The maps that come out, based on British reports, showing the Skaggerrak, Kattegat, large areas of the Norwegian and Baltic coast interdicted by mine barrages couldn't possibly be true.

Wider Distribution Now

Woodrow Wilson was the great advocate of the World war North sea mine barrage. Our navy and our industry helped put it down. I have forgotten how long the actual laying of it took. My recollection is three months. But I know very well that it took even more months of industrial and naval preparation and production. Present reports of mined areas show a much wider distribution. If we are to believe press reports, they were completely mined in a few days. It just isn't in the cards.

The earlier reports of British invasion of the Skagerrak, Kattegat and Baltic intimated that the British Navy had moved in as Nelson did with all its force and swept those channels clean of German transport and naval craft. I wrote a colmumn all whooping with admiration that something had happened to recall Kipling's "Ballad of Clampherdown" or Sir Henry Newbolt's "Drake's Drum"—great sagas of the British Navy.

Will First Be Sure

Then I stopped to think of the utter inadaptability of modern battleship fleets to narrow waters and I tore that up. The British are apparentsly doing all their brave naval stuff in the old and noble tradition. But the technical impossible just doesn't happen. That doesn't mean that the day may not come when the British battle fleet will steam into the Baltic and dominate it. It only means that Mr. Winston Churchill is not going to risk his right arm—his only arm—into a bear trap until he is reasonably sure that it won't be biteen off by mines, submarines, shore batteries and aircraft.

The situation in Norway, the Baltic, the North Sea, and connecting waters is obscure to the nth degree. I doubt if it will be much clearer in the next ten days. I don't say this as a military expert. I still believe that in the tremendous change and flux of modern war there is no such animal, except in one single area.

Fixed Principals

The essential principles of strategy, as distinguished from tactics, never change. Under extension and dissemination of forces, buttering force too thin over too much area, departure from the advantage of interior lines, failure to remain always able to concentrate superior force on critical areas regardless of total relative force, slow action and neglect of the element of surprise, these have been the causs of both military and naval defeat.

Operations in Europe may be judged a little later on these elements but not in the present obscurity. On all the cards as yet revealed, I pass.

The Far East Gets The War Jitters

THE WAR JITTERS have spread into the Far East with a lot of worry being cooked up about possible Japanese attempts to seize control of the Netherlands East Indies.

The islands are immediately south of the Philippines, and as that would bring the war closer to this nation, much concern is being felt by our diplomatic representatives in that part of the world and by our naval men, as well as those who carry the belief that we are sure to be dragged into this war whether we want to be dragged or not.

But it is to be remembered that a lot of warnings and hullabaloos and scares about this war have come into public notice at various times that have never amounted to anything. Perhaps in this instance, as some observers note, the Japanese are merely putting up a "trial balloon," to ascertain just how far it could go without incurring intervention by other powers.

But, as the Manila Daily Bulletin has observed, "it is inconceivable that the United States would consider going to war to protect the rubber and tin supply of the Netherlands East Indies." It adds that while America is vitally concerned in the peace in that part of the world, "American guardianship is only for the territory over which the American flag flies."

That is about the size of it.

Germ of Hopeful Portent Is Seen in Scandinavia

THE SITUATION in and around Scandinavia is changing too rapidly to permit of any intelligent appraisal until the smoke has cleared, but the number of German ships destroyed by the British navy and the landing of an expeditionary force by the Allies seem to contain at least the germ of hopeful portent.

It seems clear that whatever else may happen, the Germans will find it impossible to get iron ore from Sweden for some time to come.

Even the capture of Denmark is not an unmixed advantage for Germany. It is true that Denmark ships a vast amount of dairy and hog products, but perhaps it is not generally realized that most of the feed to fatten these cows and pigs has to be brought from the outside. Much of it was shipped in from Great Britain.

Thus it appears that while the Nazis will be able to replenish their larder temporarily by confiscating Danish supplies and putting the Danes themselves on half rations, the time will soon come when Denmark will be a liability rather than an asset.

It is possible that the Germans in their desperation will attempt to invade Sweden, but the blitzkrieg is over. All Scandinavia is on guard and has taken such precautions as are possible. And an Allied expeditionary force is on the way.

It seems possible that Nazi desperation will next turn to the Balkans, but even there they will get no iron ore.

Soil Bacteria Development Holds Big Possibilities

FROM THE SOIL comes life; from it, death. From it can come ailment, and from it remedy.

Dr. Rene J. Dubos, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, has isolated from soil bacteria powerful chemicals which can be used as antidotes to such deadly germs as streptococci and others which prey upon mankind.

Starting with the simple proposition that the micro-organisms in the soil have a hand in giving life, Dr. Dubos watched how those same bugs destroy a thing after it is dead. This destruction is done by soil bacteria through the manufacture of chemicals which consume by digesting the substance attacked. The bacteria are countless and so are the chemical compounds they concoct. Those chemical compounds make war on microbes pestering mankind.

There is a chance that there is a soil bacteria chemical compound for every human ill arising from germ attack. Dr. Dubos demonstrated at the annual congress of the American College of Physicians the other day at Cleveland that he had isolated one chemical which he calls "gramcidin" of such activity that one one-hundredth of a milligram of it is sufficient to kill 1,000,000,000 pneumonia germs or streptococci within two hours at 37 degrees Centigrade.

Constructive Remedies Are Offered by Candidates

A FAVORITE SUBTERFUGE of New Deal supporters in attempting to answer some of the many charges of failure and mismanagement made against the Washington administration is that nothing constructive is suggested at the same time. Candidate Dewey has been the victim of such evasive criticism.

But Dewey has been coming along almost day after day confounding that dodge by proffering definite remedial suggestions, and it can be said that other Republican candidates are likewise doing the same thing.

For example, this newspaper has just commented on Dewey's remarks as to the manner in which the Roosevelt administration has been strafing business, both big and little. But in so noting, the candidate has offered remedial measures quite to the point. There are seven specific things he would do, and which should be done.

The first of these would be to "stop government policies that discourage the job-making business life of the nation." Other steps include a stopover of bureaucratic interference with the management of honest business, the placing of experience, ability and fair play in regulatory bodies; redesigning the tax structure so it will no longer drive money into the bomb-proof shelters; improving credit facilities for small business; putting an end to government policies of defeatism, of ill-conceived experiments, of frantic improvising in domestic and foreign affairs; learning the difference between stopping abuses and grabbing power; and learning again the difference between government by law and government by men.

These steps are direly needed and the sooner they are taken the better.

War and Names In Two States

A COLUMNIST in a Charleston, W. Va., newspaper, the Daily Mail, observes that if the United States should be drawn into the European holacaust West Virginia could and would furnish a full quota for the army, adding that some of them would come from such places as War and War Eagle, Barracksville and Garrison.

The Parkersburg Sentinel in the same state notes that the state has other communities with warlike names, there being six Forts, namely, Fort Ashby, Fort Neal, Fort Run, Fort Seybert, Fort Gay and Fort Spring.

But just to prove that there is nothing after all in a name, the Parkersburg editor observes that the makings of good soldiers might be found in such places as Friendly, Goodwill, Harmony and Prudence, all towns in the state. But for real fighters, fit to make a blitzkrieg of the war, it is suggested that the recruiting officers could look to Whirlwind, Tornado and Hurricane.

Maryland does not come in for so many warlike town and community names, although it has its quota of Forts, these being Fort Howard in Baltimore county, Fort Hoyle in Harford, Fort Washington in Prince George's, and Fort Friendship in Anne Arundel. There are also some Forts not towns, such as Fort Cumberland here and Fort Frederick in Frederick county. The nearest this state comes to warlike community names otherwise is in Garrison in Baltimore county and possibly in Germantown in Montgomery and Chase in Baltimore county; but there is a Friendsville in Garret, a Friendship in Anne Arundel and an East Friendship in Howard.

All of which is another reminder that a rose by any other name smells as sweet.

Stamp Sticking Is Now A Hundred Years Old

OVER THE WORLD the followers of the foremost of all hobbies—stamp collecting—are helping the public generally to note that the adhesive postage stamp is now completing its hundredth year.

Probably no one thing of its size has ever exceeded in importance the postage stamp. Letters were as old as the hills a century ago. But because of the expense of the post comparatively few people wrote them. When the railroad came personal correspondence multiplied. The British post under this increase was in a deplorable state.

Rowland Hill, a business man, conceived a penny (two cents) charge for an ounce of mail, payable in advance. This payment was at first evidenced by a decorated sheet of writing paper. This failed of popularity.

The adhesive postage stamp which quickly supplanted the sheet was instantly accepted. The stamp did not stick very well. There was a hot debate whether it was safe to let the postmaster stick it on. He might pocket the patron's money and not buy the stamp.

At the start it never occurred to any one that the patron could stamp his own letters. But once the patron demonstrated that he could do it all over the world postmasters thereafter indignantly declined to lick any more stamps themselves.

A New York publisher reports that researchers for his firm have found that single women enjoy fiction more than married women and why shouldn't they? Married women hear so much of it, it kind of loses its zing.

Little Boy with a Knife

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The little boy who is not-quite-seven looked at me as though he couldn't quite believe his ears. His eye open wide, he grinned joyously, he shouted, "A knife! A knife for ME! A real knife!" . . . And then he reached out and took that inexpensive pocket knife and held it in his hand as though it were the most precious thing in all the world.

Marshall Maslin

And perhaps it was. Perhaps there is no more wonderful moment in a small boy's life than that moment when his father decides he is old enough to have a knife all his own and brings it home to him and surprises him with the knife he had only wistfully dreamed of possessing. . . . So little Master Not-Quite-Seven asked how it opened, and asked if it was "really sharp" and heard his father warn him not to cut anything around the house and not to run with it open in his hand and was quiet for a few moments and then said very proudly indeed:

"Do you know, Daddy—there isn't another kid in the whole first grade that has a knife of his own? Gee!"

So he took his knife and put it in his pocket—the pocket with the zipper fastener on it—and went outside, hoping there'd be another "kid" outside he could show his treasure to. . . . And I looked out the window a few minutes later and saw him wandering around in a daze, looking at the fence post, and looking at a tree about five inches through and looking at the wall of the garage—and before he could put that knife to work I told him he'd find some pieces of wood behind the garage and he'd better try his 'prentice hand on that.

Which is exactly what he did. . . . And before he went to bed he'd already started work on a boat that would probably be the best boat any kid ever made, Daddy. Even in his bath he was carving on that boat—and I had to admit it was a very fine sea-going vessel. . . . And when I went in to see Mr. Not-Quite-Seven at 11 o'clock, before I myself went to bed, there he was lying like the little angel he isn't—and one hand was twisted around so that his fist was under the pillow—and in that small fist was his wonderful twenty-five cent knife.

And I envied my small boy the great happiness that was his, and was glad I was a father. Because one of the great joys of parenthood is seeing a young thing live for the first time the experiences that were ours in that long, long ago.

Fall of Napoleon Suggests Parallel

Edwin C. Hill

Arresting comparisons and analogies are being made with respect to the Austrian housepainter and army corporal who became the ruler of eighty million people and the commander-in-chief of a mighty army, and the Corsican corporal who emerged by sheer genius from bitter poverty to build an empire as great as Rome's—Herr Hitler of Vienna, Mr. Bonaparte of Corsica.

Such comparisons and analogies are often misleading and fallacious. Despite many wise saws to the contrary, history does not repeat itself. But it is true that, since Napoleon's day, Fate has not erupted a personality, a force, a cunning, such as that which has been demonstrated by the German dictator. And there does exist certain interesting similarities.

Both originated in poverty and obscurity. Both held, in youth, a non-commissioned rank. Both turned against revolutions which had produced republics. Both transformed these republics into empires. Both were held to be mystics. Both were noted for swift, decisive action. Both practiced the celebrated military maxim of the Confederate General Forrest, "Get there fustest with the mostest."

Both made an alliance with Russia and for identical reasons—fear and hatred of Great Britain. In Napoleon's case the Russian alliance was not only a blunder, it was a ruinous blunder. It may well turn out so in Herr Hitler's case. Neither could endure opposition and burst into explosive rages on any such provocation. Each had his familiars. Hitler's Himmler corresponds to Napoleon's chief of secret police, Fouche. Hitler's von Ribbentrop may be compared to a much greater man, Napoleon's Talleyrand. One could evince many such parallels.

Hugo Recalled

Will Hitler last? Scarcely a day passes that this question does not crop up in the mail? Who knows? But there does come to mind a chapter of "Les Miserables". It was Victor Hugo who wrote, in one of the greatest and most human novels that ever was forged in the fires of genius, this apostrophe of the fall of Napoleon. It was not the sunken road of Ohain, which ensulfed the charging and otherwise irresistible heavy cavalry of the great Marshal Nevy; it was not the failure of Grouchy to arrive before Blucher. It was not the pain and faintness of developing cancer overcoming him at the moment when his superlative genius was needed—not any of these causes was responsible for his defeat at Waterloo.

Not in the Law

"Was it possible," said Victor Hugo, "that Napoleon should win this battle? We answer no. Why? Because of Wellington? Because of Blucher. No. Because of God. For Bonaparte to be conqueror at Waterloo was not in the law of the Nineteenth century.

"Another series of facts were preparing in which Napoleon had no place. The ill-will of events had long been announced. It was time that this vast man should fall. The excessive weight of this man in human destiny disturbed the equilibrium. This individual counted, of himself alone, more than the universe besides. These plethoras of all human vitality concentrated in a single head, the world mounting to the brain of one man, would be fatal to civilization if they should endure. The moment had come for incorruptible supreme equity to look to it.

Formidable Pleaders

"Probably the principles and elements upon which regular gravitations in the moral order as well as in the material depend, began to murmur. Reeking blood, overcrowded cemeteries, weeping mothers—these are formidable pleaders. When the earth is suffering from a surcharg, there are mysterious moanings from the deeps which the heavens hear. Napoleon had been impeached before the Infinite, and his fall was decreed. He vexed God. Waterloo is not a battle; it is the change of front of the universe."—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, April 18.—If it were possible to isolate our domestic politics from the war, the domestic situation would be simple. It is illustrated by the status of two measures now before the House—the Walter-Logan bill to restrain the New Deal alphabetical agencies and the proposed amending of the National Labor Relations act.

Mark Sullivan

To understand the present stage, go back to the beginning. The time was early 1937, when President Roosevelt sent his court measure to Congress, and there arose a wave of "sit-down" strikes, which the administration condoned. Those two events marked the beginning of a tide away from the New Deal. The tide became conspicuous in the elections of November 1938. In those elections every Democrat whom Mr. Roosevelt had attempted to purge, was returned to the Senate; some radical New Dealers, notably Congressman Maury Maverick, lost their seats; the Republicans almost doubled their membership of the House, from ninety to 169.

A Check at Least

The new Congress then elected—it was the same Congress now sitting—met in January 1939. It was, if not an anti-New Deal Congress, at least a "check the New Deal" one. Since this Congress first sat it can almost be said to have passed no measure that was an advance of the New Deal. (Re-enactment of the trade pacts was just that, a re-enactment, not an advance; besides, that was a Hull victory—which is not quite the same thing as a New Deal victory.) On the other hand, this Congress passed many measures which trimmed down the New Deal. It repealed the undistributed surplus tax; it reorganized WPA and lopped off some of its functions, such as the Federal Theatre project. By an action so unprecedented as to be flagrant, it refused to entertain a "spend-lend" proposal Mr. Roosevelt had sent to it.

Faced by this condition, the New Deal, since January 1939, has been fighting a rear-guard battle. Whenever the New Dealers amend a pending measure so as to make it less drastic, that is a New Deal victory. If they prevent a measure from passing, that is a battle won. Rarely or never can they prevent a measure from passing by a straight frontal fight, by registering a majority on a roll-call. Most of their victories are victories of postponement, won by "stalling."

The War on Cancer

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

The national crusade this month to acquaint the public with the known facts about cancer—a crusade in which Morgantown and Monongalia county are joining—is faced right at the beginning with two attitudes which are difficult to overcome.

The first attitude is: "It can't happen to me."

The second is: "If it does happen to me, there is nothing to be done about it."

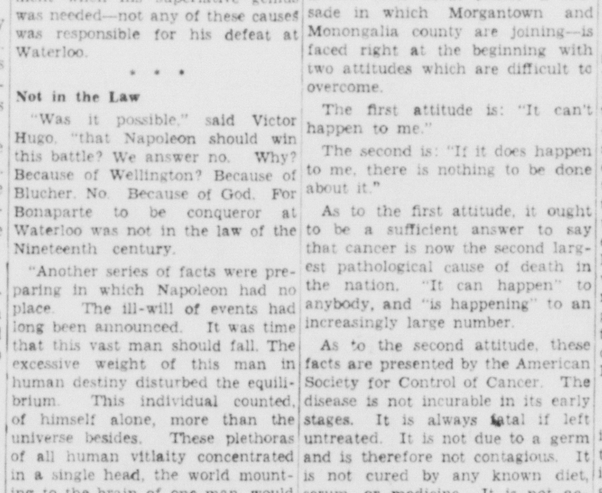

As to the first attitude, it ought to be a sufficient answer to say that cancer is now the second largest pathological cause of death in the nation. "It can happen" to anybody, and "is happening" to an increasingly large number.

As to the second attitude, these facts are presented by the American Society for Control of Cancer. The disease is not incurable in its early stages. It is always fatal if left untreated. It is not due to a germ and is therefore not contagious. It is not cured by any known diet, serum, or medicine. It is not accompanied by pain in its first stages except in bone cancer. Cancer is a rapidly growing tissue growth serving no useful purpose. It is not caused by worry, modern refrigeration, metal utensils, alcohol, or immoral practices.

At the present state of medical knowledge, the best weapon in the fight on cancer is regular physical examinations to detect the malady in its early and curable stage.

The spread of information on this disease and on its treatment is designed to encourage early diagnosis of any possible symptoms in order to catch more cases in the curable stage.

The British are apparently doing all their brave naval stuff in the old and noble tradition. But the technical impossible just doesn't happen. That doesn't mean that the day may not come when the British battle fleet will steam into the Baltic and dominate it. It only means that Mr. Winston Churchill is not going to risk his right arm—his only arm—into a bear trap until he is reasonably sure that it won't be biteen off by mines, submarines, shore batteries and aircraft.

The situation in Norway, the Baltic, the North Sea, and connecting waters is obscure to the nth degree. I doubt if it will be much clearer in the next ten days. I don't say this as a military expert. I still believe that in the tremendous change and flux of modern war there is no such animal, except in one single area.

Fixed Principals

The essential principles of strategy, as distinguished from tactics, never change. Under extension and dissemination of forces, buttering force too thin over too much area, departure from the advantage of interior lines, failure to remain always able to concentrate superior force on critical areas regardless of total relative force, slow action and neglect of the element of surprise, these have been the causs of both military and naval defeat.

Operations in Europe may be judged a little later on these elements but not in the present obscurity. On all the cards as yet revealed, I pass. —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Not To Be Expected

The attitude of most big stores that "the customer is always right," should not influence a person to expect unreasonable things of her favorite shop, such as return of garments bought carelessly, making extra work and expense for the store.

Barclay on Bridge

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities."

THE DANGEROUS WAY

TRYING for the even break of a suit, in order to set up the thirteener, involves one special risk which is not attached to any other kind of trick establishment. If the suit breaks badly enough, you may set up several winning tricks for the holder of the longer string. This danger is never present in the effort to set up the lower honors of a sequence, as then all that the opponents can get is their higher honors.

3 NT

The opening lead of the club 7 looked like the top of a probable trebleton to South, especially after the 8 brought the 9 from East. Figuring that suit would break, he counted four tricks there, two in diamonds and three in hearts, if the finesse would work. So he won the first trick with the club A, led the club K and was sunk when West discarded a spade. He then tried spades, hoping West had the high ones. East won with the spade A, led another club to the Q, and ducked the spade return. Declarer then tried the heart finesse, which lost. West fired back a spade to the K, and East cashed the two clubs which set the contract.

South could have played safe. After winning the club lead, he could have led the spade J to East, won a club return in his own hand, repeated spades and, when East took his second honor there, the club Q would have been an entry for declarer to take two tricks in spades which, added to his two sure ones in hearts and diamonds and three in clubs, would have made his nine needed for game.

Against South's 3-No Trumps, if West leads the diamond 5 to East's J, and on the 7 South plays his A, how can West know he must put his K under the A?

Relaxing Dividends

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHAT DO you know about relaxation? If you are a drive-yourself woman, my paper friend, you just don't know a thing about it. Could you lie down in the afternoon, close your eyes, free your mind of every care and drop asleep in three minutes? One can learn to do it, and it will keep the evidences of the birthdays from piling up in a heap.

When baby is cross, mama says baby is tired. When mama is cross, it is because she is tired. So why shouldn't she arrange her life so that she can snatch much-needed rest? Continued fatigue wrecks appearance, ties the central nervous system into tight knots and sours the sweetest disposition. It causes the hands to tremble, affects the eyesight, makes small irritations seem like serious troubles.

Shirk your duties now and then; do a flop. Take long, deep inhalations, lifting the chest. Count them. This will keep you from thinking about the whale of a grocery bill that is coming in the first of the month. Visualize pleasant places. Fancy yourself an old log in a dark forest. Make yourself feel heavy. Relax every muscle. Even if you don't sleep, you'll have renewed energy in 15 minutes, can tackle the old job with spirit and dispatch.

Only the lady of leisure with a fat balance in the check book can afford to indulge in an elaborate hairdress. It's a bother and a bore to arrange some of the upswept effects with rolls that must be shining smooth, precisely and exactly in place.

A pretty fancy is the long bob with ringleted ends and the semi-pompadour. Take the forward locks in hand, tie a tiny bow four inches from the ends, form the ends into two or three rolls. Pin them so that the hair close to the head forms a pompadour. A blessing to the moon-faced darling, it makes her face look oval.

Baker Opposes Patman Chain Store Bill

Washington, April 18 (AP)—A representative of labor joined executives of chain stores here in opposing the Patman bill to tax interstate chain stores.

C. M. Baker, president of the International Typographical Union, told a House sub-committee the measure in effect would levy a tax on initiative and efficiency, and place a premium upon mediocrity.

"You do not need to tax to destroy," he said. "Whenever one of the concerns affected by this bill ceases to serve the public and to continuously 'tell' the public what it has to offer and where it is offered and at what prices, it will pass from the picture."

Baker said that fifty-one daily newspapers had suspended publication last year, and that the Patman bill, forcing chain stores to close because of prohibitive taxation, probably would accelerate such newspaper suspensions by removing an important source of advertising revenue.

Miss Rose V. Murray and R. E. Hager Are United at Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Rose Veronica Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Murray, of 226 Union street, and Robert E. Hager, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hager of 410 Leheigh street, took place at 7 o'clock last night at St. Patrick's Catholic church. The Rev. Fr. John E. Mountain conducted the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a cadet blue tailored suit with matching accessories and a corsage of orchids.

Miss Grace Murphy was maid of honor and wore a dusty rose tailored suit and a corsage of gardenias. John Hager, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception for members of the immediate families was held at the home of the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to eastern cities, Mr. and Mrs. Hager will be at home at 332 Baltimore avenue.

Mrs. Hager was graduated from Allegany high school, class of 1935, and Mr. Hager was graduated from the same school in the class of 1936. He is associated with the German Brewing Company.

THE DANGEROUS WAY

TRYING for the even break of a suit, in order to set up the thirteener, involves one special risk which is not attached to any other kind of trick establishment. If the suit breaks badly enough, you may set up several winning tricks for the holder of the longer string. This danger is never present in the effort to set up the lower honors of a sequence, as then all that the opponents can get is their higher honors.

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

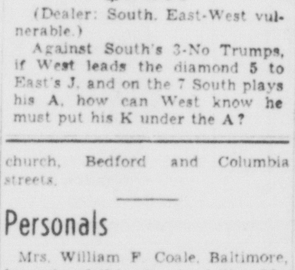

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 NT

The opening lead of the club 7 looked like the top of a probable trebleton to South, especially after the 8 brought the 9 from East. Figuring that suit would break, he counted four tricks there, two in diamonds and three in hearts, if the finesse would work. So he won the first trick with the club A, led the club K and was sunk when West discarded a spade. He then tried spades, hoping West had the high ones. East won with the spade A, led another club to the Q, and ducked the spade return. Declarer then tried the heart finesse, which lost. West fired back a spade to the K, and East cashed the two clubs which set the contract.

South could have played safe. After winning the club lead, he could have led the spade J to East, won a club return in his own hand, repeated spades and, when East took his second honor there, the club Q would have been an entry for declarer to take two tricks in spades which, added to his two sure ones in hearts and diamonds and three in clubs, would have made his nine needed for game.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

Against South's 3-No Trumps, if West leads the diamond 5 to East's J, and on the 7 South plays his A, how can West know he must put his K under the A?

Relaxing Dividends

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHAT DO you know about relaxation? If you are a drive-yourself woman, my paper friend, you just don't know a thing about it. Could you lie down in the afternoon, close your eyes, free your mind of every care and drop asleep in three minutes? One can learn to do it, and it will keep the evidences of the birthdays from piling up in a heap.

When baby is cross, mama says baby is tired. When mama is cross, it is because she is tired. So why shouldn't she arrange her life so that she can snatch much-needed rest? Continued fatigue wrecks appearance, ties the central nervous system into tight knots and sours the sweetest disposition. It causes the hands to tremble, affects the eyesight, makes small irritations seem like serious troubles.

Shirk your duties now and then; do a flop. Take long, deep inhalations, lifting the chest. Count them. This will keep you from thinking about the whale of a grocery bill that is coming in the first of the month. Visualize pleasant places. Fancy yourself an old log in a dark forest. Make yourself feel heavy. Relax every muscle. Even if you don't sleep, you'll have renewed energy in 15 minutes, can tackle the old job with spirit and dispatch.

Only the lady of leisure with a fat balance in the check book can afford to indulge in an elaborate hairdress. It's a bother and a bore to arrange some of the upswept effects with rolls that must be shining smooth, precisely and exactly in place.

A pretty fancy is the long bob with ringleted ends and the semi-pompadour. Take the forward locks in hand, tie a tiny bow four inches from the ends, form the ends into two or three rolls. Pin them so that the hair close to the head forms a pompadour. A blessing to the moon-faced darling, it makes her face look oval.

Not To Be Expected

The attitude of most big stores that "the customer is always right," should not influence a person to expect unreasonable things of her favorite shop, such as return of garments bought carelessly, making extra work and expense for the store.

Baker Opposes Patman Chain Store Bill

Washington, April 18 (AP)—A representative of labor joined executives of chain stores here in opposing the Patman bill to tax interstate chain stores.

C. M. Baker, president of the International Typographical Union, told a House sub-committee the measure in effect would levy a tax on initiative and efficiency, and place a premium upon mediocrity.

"You do not need to tax to destroy," he said. "Whenever one of the concerns affected by this bill ceases to serve the public and to continuously 'tell' the public what it has to offer and where it is offered and at what prices, it will pass from the picture."

Baker said that fifty-one daily newspapers had suspended publication last year, and that the Patman bill, forcing chain stores to close because of prohibitive taxation, probably would accelerate such newspaper suspensions by removing an important source of advertising revenue.

THE DAILY STORY

MODEL WIFE

Geoffrey Appreciated Real Beauty when It Was Pointed Out to Him, but Oftentimes That Was Too Late

BY HELEN MARKSMAN

Richard Stafford threw down the morning newspaper and began to pace back and forth in his high, well-lighted studio. He should have been happy, for only last night the Art Institute had presented him with the coveted Salon Prize, but as a matter of fact he was savagely angry with himself.

It had all begun at a cocktail party on an April afternoon several months ago. Richard, bored by the inanity of the gathering, had been chatting casually with Geoffrey when his attention had been suddenly caught by a girl standing alone in the embrasure of a window. The cool April sunshine threw a golden nimbus around her head and accented softly the hunter's-green dress she was wearing. In the sophisticated setting of Clare Forsyth's drawing room she looked as out of place as a dryad who had strayed into the modern world by mistake.

She Colored Painfully

Richard Stafford nodded toward her. "Who is she?" he asked. "I'd like to paint her."

"Oh, that's Arlene Stevens," Geoffrey Hunt's voice was careless, "but you ought to see her sister Phyllis—she's the beauty of the family. If you're looking for someone to paint, I'd suggest her."

After a great deal of persuasion, Arlene finally consented to pose for Richard. "Wood-Nymph at a Cocktail Party" was the name that he gave the canvas in his own mind from the first. He posed her in a green tunic the color of forest leaves, with her coppery gold hair falling over her shoulders and a fillet of tawny oak leaves in her hair. He placed her in front of a window just as she had stood when he saw her first, and that same elfin, dream-haunted expression on her face.

It was that expression which tantalized him from the first. He suspected that she must be in love, but it was not until the fourth or fifth sitting that he felt he knew her well enough to ask about it. At first she colored painfully like a schoolgirl and then a little jerkily began to tell him the story.

"Of course, it's silly of me,' she confessed, "because I've known it was helpless almost from the beginning. You see, the first day I met Geoffery I thought he was interested in me. Afterward I discovered that it was only because he knew that I was Phyllis' sister and was anxious to meet her that he had been so attentive to me. But I can't seem to get him out of my head. Now if I were only beautiful like Phyllis——"

"But you are beautiful," Richard interposed quickly. "What you need is to be dramatized. The average person sees beauty only after it has been pointed out to him. Everyone will realize how beautiful you really are after this picture is exhibited—but if you want to make a stir before then," he looked at her thoughtfully, "you'll have to dress for the part."

"How?" Arlene's voice was quiet, but her eyes widened with excitement.

And Richard told her. He told her how to walk so that she would look like the Winged Victory instead of just another of this season's debutantes. He showed her how to wear her hair, brushed until it shone and clinging like a golden cap to her beautifully modeled head. Then he went over to the drawing board and with his deft pencil began to sketch the type of clothes she should wear—an evening wrap faintly reminiscent of an Elizabethan court, a street suit that might have been modeled after a Medici page boy's, only subtly modernized; and a half-dozen other gowns designed to bring out her odd and piquant beauty.

As Richard had anticipated, the magic worked. A little over a week later Arlene came dancing into the studio, her face radiant. She was wearing a street dress that Richard had designed and had combed her hair the new way.

"Dick, you're a magician," she laughed. "I just met Geoffrey on the street and he looked at me as if he were seeing me for the first time. He said he wants to see me a lot oftener and he's invited me to go to the Vandergrif's party with him next week."

And that, ironically enough, was the moment Richard realized he was in love with Arlene himself.

After that he tried to make up for lost time. But although he invited her out to luncheon, got special seats at the theater for her and took her dancing Arlene persisted in treating him like a kind elder brother.

Things had come to a climax the night before.

That was why he was so angry with himself this morning. If he had only realized his own love for her in time he might have won her instead of doing everything possible to make her the kind of person that Geoffrey would want. Well, there was no use acting like a college sophomore, he reflected bitterly—might as well get to work and try to drown his sorrows in his paint brush and palette.

So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he hardly heard the light knock a few moments later, but when the door opened he turned swiftly Arlene was standing there, her eyes grave.

"I suppose you've seen the papers," she said without preamble.

"Yes, Geoffrey's a lucky fellow." Even to himself his voice sounded dry and a little harsh. "I hope you'll be very happy——"

"Not with Geoffrey," said Arlene. "I don't believe I really knew him until I saw how quickly he used our engagement to get publicity for himself. Even when he was proposing he kept telling me what an asset I'd be to him. I didn't realize what he meant until I saw the headlines this morning. He must have called the newspaper just as soon as he left me."

"Then you're not going to marry him?" Richard tried to keep the relief out of his voice.

"Certainly not," said Arlene, "that's what I've been telling you. I called Geoffrey this morning and broke the engagement. I told him I wouldn't be at the receiving end of any publicity stunt. He was furious of course but," she looked at Richard mischievously, "I don't think his heart will be broken. I've discovered that Geoffrey is interested only in Geoffrey."

"And I," said Richard, "am interested only in you. Look, Arlene," he put his hands on her shoulders and gazed deep into her eyes, "it's only one easy step from the perfect model to the model wife. Will you take it—with me?"

"Yes, Richard," she said. And then they both laughed. Because she sounded so exactly like the perfect wife. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

THE DAILY STORY

MODEL WIFE

Geoffrey Appreciated Real Beauty when It Was Pointed Out to Him, but Oftentimes That Was Too Late

BY HELEN MARKSMAN

Richard Stafford threw down the morning newspaper and began to pace back and forth in his high, well-lighted studio. He should have been happy, for only last night the Art Institute had presented him with the coveted Salon Prize, but as a matter of fact he was savagely angry with himself.

It had all begun at a cocktail party on an April afternoon several months ago. Richard, bored by the inanity of the gathering, had been chatting casually with Geoffrey when his attention had been suddenly caught by a girl standing alone in the embrasure of a window. The cool April sunshine threw a golden nimbus around her head and accented softly the hunter's-green dress she was wearing. In the sophisticated setting of Clare Forsyth's drawing room she looked as out of place as a dryad who had strayed into the modern world by mistake.

Richard Stafford nodded toward her. "Who is she?" he asked. "I'd like to paint her."

"Oh, that's Arlene Stevens," Geoffrey Hunt's voice was careless, "but you ought to see her sister Phyllis—she's the beauty of the family. If you're looking for someone to paint, I'd suggest her."

After a great deal of persuasion, Arlene finally consented to pose for Richard. "Wood-Nymph at a Cocktail Party" was the name that he gave the canvas in his own mind from the first. He posed her in a green tunic the color of forest leaves, with her coppery gold hair falling over her shoulders and a fillet of tawny oak leaves in her hair. He placed her in front of a window just as she had stood when he saw her first, and that same elfin, dream-haunted expression on her face.

She Colored Painfully

It was that expression which tantalized him from the first. He suspected that she must be in love, but it was not until the fourth or fifth sitting that he felt he knew her well enough to ask about it. At first she colored painfully like a schoolgirl and then a little jerkily began to tell him the story.

"Of course, it's silly of me," she confessed, "because I've known it was helpless almost from the beginning. You see, the first day I met Geoffery I thought he was interested in me. Afterward I discovered that it was only because he knew that I was Phyllis' sister and was anxious to meet her that he had been so attentive to me. But I can't seem to get him out of my head. Now if I were only beautiful like Phyllis——"

"But you are beautiful," Richard interposed quickly. "What you need is to be dramatized. The average person sees beauty only after it has been pointed out to him. Everyone will realize how beautiful you really are after this picture is exhibited—but if you want to make a stir before then," he looked at her thoughtfully, "you'll have to dress for the part."

"How?" Arlene's voice was quiet, but her eyes widened with excitement.

And Richard told her. He told her how to walk so that she would look like the Winged Victory instead of just another of this season's debutantes. He showed her how to wear her hair, brushed until it shone and clinging like a golden cap to her beautifully modeled head. Then he went over to the drawing board and with his deft pencil began to sketch the type of clothes she should wear—an evening wrap faintly reminiscent of an Elizabethan court, a street suit that might have been modeled after a Medici page boy's, only subtly modernized; and a half-dozen other gowns designed to bring out her odd and piquant beauty.

As Richard had anticipated, the magic worked. A little over a week later Arlene came dancing into the studio, her face radiant. She was wearing a street dress that Richard had designed and had combed her hair the new way.

"Dick, you're a magician," she laughed. "I just met Geoffrey on the street and he looked at me as if he were seeing me for the first time. He said he wants to see me a lot oftener and he's invited me to go to the Vandergrif's party with him next week."

And that, ironically enough, was the moment Richard realized he was in love with Arlene himself.

After that he tried to make up for lost time. But although he invited her out to luncheon, got special seats at the theater for her and took her dancing Arlene persisted in treating him like a kind elder brother.

Things had come to a climax the night before.

That was why he was so angry with himself this morning. If he had only realized his own love for her in time he might have won her instead of doing everything possible to make her the kind of person that Geoffrey would want. Well, there was no use acting like a college sophomore, he reflected bitterly—might as well get to work and try to drown his sorrows in his paint brush and palette.

So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he hardly heard the light knock a few moments later, but when the door opened he turned swiftly Arlene was standing there, her eyes grave.

"I suppose you've seen the papers," she said without preamble.

"Yes, Geoffrey's a lucky fellow." Even to himself his voice sounded dry and a little harsh. "I hope you'll be very happy——"

"Not with Geoffrey," said Arlene. "I don't believe I really knew him until I saw how quickly he used our engagement to get publicity for himself. Even when he was proposing he kept telling me what an asset I'd be to him. I didn't realize what he meant until I saw the headlines this morning. He must have called the newspaper just as soon as he left me."

"Then you're not going to marry him?" Richard tried to keep the relief out of his voice.

"Certainly not," said Arlene, "that's what I've been telling you. I called Geoffrey this morning and broke the engagement. I told him I wouldn't be at the receiving end of any publicity stunt. He was furious of course but," she looked at Richard mischievously, "I don't think his heart will be broken. I've discovered that Geoffrey is interested only in Geoffrey."

"And I," said Richard, "am interested only in you. Look, Arlene," he put his hands on her shoulders and gazed deep into her eyes, "it's only one easy step from the perfect model to the model wife. Will you take it—with me?"

"Yes, Richard," she said. And then they both laughed. Because she sounded so exactly like the perfect wife. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Proving Love Too Soon Is Seen as A Fatal Mistake

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

In spite of all our talk about a change in sex standards and single code for men and women, down deep in the heart of the average man there exists the old law of the primal tribe. If a girl proves her love to him before she is bound to him, he is apt to reason that she will be likely to prove her love to someone else.

The subjoined letter in the morning's mail speaks for itself:

"I'm still in my teens," it states, "and I have a lovely baby a year old. My husband is several years older. During our engagement he persuaded me that an engagement is as binding as marriage. And I gave in to his demands with the result that my baby was born too soon after our marriage to silence gossip, and my mother said I had disgraced the family. However, mother has forgiven me and urges me to get a divorce because I have been so badly treated.

Advice Not Taken

"You see, I wouldn't take her advice, and when she used to try to persuade me before I was married to go to parties and dances and meet other young men, I wouldn't listen, because the man I married had said so many dreadful things about parties and girls who danced, that I just couldn't bring myself to go out with other young people. Of course I was terribly in love with him and agreed to follow his wishes.

"His jealousy has continued and I do not dare see my old friends, even girls, because he is always accusing me of doing wrong and saying what a swell time he would have if he hadn't had to marry me.

"After the baby was three months old my husband decided to be single again, and started running around with all the girls and married women in town.

Separation Urged

"Mother has been coming to see me and she has urged me to separate from my husband. She agrees to take the baby so I could go to work. But my husband says he will never give up the baby and I am afraid if we do become legally separated, he will try to bring some charges against me, saying that I am an unfit mother. He has beaten and abused me on many occasions, and I suppose I might be able to get a divorce on the grounds of cruelty. But will he make up something about me so that I can't have my baby?"

Until this girl obtains a divorce or legal separation,—and she had better look into the conditions implied by both these decrees—she must be entirely circumspect. She must not be seen with any other man, or even go out with a crowd of young people when men are present.

Should Get Legal Advice

All of this may seem to be overcautious, but in parts of her letter, which is too long to print, it is likely that this badly treated young wife may have felt entitled at times to go out with some friends—boys and girls—and if her husband finds it out, it will not be hard to fabricate charges.

My suggestion to her is that if her mother cannot afford to employ a lawyer, that she take up her case with the Legal Aid Society. If she writes to me again, I hope she will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope, as it has not been easy to discuss her letter fully in this column.

According to scientific experimennts no person should boast that he can "down a dozen drinks without showing it." Somewhere between one and two pints of whiskey, quickly imbibed, is the limit of the average human without fatal results.

Personal To Fat Girls

Now you may slim down your face and figure without starvation dieting or back-breaking exercises. Just eat sensibly and take Marmola under the conditions and according to directions on the package.

Marmola Tablets have been sold to the public for more than thirty years. More than twenty million boxes have been distributed during that period.

Marmola is not a cure-all. Marmola is only for adult fat persons whose fatness is caused by a thyroid deficiency (hypothyroidism) but who are otherwise normal and healthy. We do not make any diagnosis as that is the function of your physician, who must be consulted for that purpose. Why not try to lose those ugly, uncomfortable pounds the Marmola way? THE KILLER SPEAKS

by RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

I CONTINUED to adjust my clothes hanging by the galley stove until I regained my composure. It would not do to let the crew know I recognized my kidnaper among them. They thought I couldn't identify him. They must continue to think so. That was why nothing had been done against me. It was considered perfectly safe to wait.

"We-ell, let's get going," drawled Pete as he rose from the table. "Berger's wharf is just around the bend."

The men filed out the door and down the steps to the main deck of the barge. The big fellow walked stooped over, which I knew was assumed as a disguise.

"How long before we make this landing?" I asked the cook.

"About five minutes."

I looked down the ladder after the men. In the swirling fog I could barely distinguish the crew as dark shapes moving among the potato sacks. Two of them paused to light cigarets and I saw their faces. There was nothing sinister about them.

The cook certainly didn't look like a criminal type. I decided to take a chance on him. "I've got to get off at this landing," I told him. "Will anyone object?"

"We-ell, I don't know. Mebbe it isn't safe. I don't know why, but somebody was trying to kill you a while ago. Mebbe you'd better not leave us."

"You think I'm safer on this boat than ashore alone?"

"How do you know you'd be alone?"

"I think I can take care of that, with your help. I've a feeling I'm not safe here."

"I sure ain't a murderer, if that's what you mean."

"I don't think you are," I reassured him. "I owe my life to the men on this barge, but at the same time I have a feeling that the man who wants to kill me is not a stranger. Am I right?"

The little man was flabbergasted by the question. He looked uneasily at the door. "No-ow, that's a kinda strong thing to say. But I—I guess you're right. We gotta pretty good idea. We ain't going to let him get away with murder, though, not on this boat!"

"That's all I want to know. You'll be glad to have me off the boat?"

"Mebbe that sounds too unfriendly. We don't want no murder, that's all."

"Good. I've got to arrange to get away. I haven't got anything against Pete or you—or this boat. All I need is fifteen minutes ashore, to telephone friends to meet me at the next landing down the river."

"You're not going to call the police?"

"No. And all you need to do is to put out the light long enough for me to get down those stairs. I'll take my chances, and be back in fifteen minutes. Nobody will ever know you helped me."

"It's a go. You're in a tight spot, Mebbe that's the best way out—if you don't call the police."

"Come along with me, if you want."

He shook his head. "That would be worse, if anyone saw me. Get ready. Here's the landing!"

The propeller had been thrown in reverse, and now the chug of the motor died. We staggered as the barge bumped.

The cook blew out the galley lantern, as though the rough landing had effected it, and I ducked out the door and down the stairs. The lantern was quickly lighted again, but I was safe among the piles of sacks.

An electric light burned above the wharf, but its glow was dimmed by the fog. The crew threw out the gangplank and started trundling hand trucks ashore for the waiting pile of sacked potatoes. An idle hand truck stood near me. I grasped the handles and boldly joined the line, keeping my head down.

In the confusion I passed unnoticed. I pushed the truck into the shadows at the far side of the pile, found a hiding place for it and, crouching low, ducked around the corner of a shed. A moment later I was climbing the levee. The hand trucks were busily rumbling back and forth across the gangplank. My flight was not discovered.

A short distance beyond the top of the levee I saw the warm glow of windows in the fog. I found the path to the house and knocked on the door, which was opened immediately by an old man.

"I'll be right with you, cap'n," he said. "You'll find 300 sacks right enough this time." He reached behind him for a lighted lantern.

"I'm not the captain," I explained. "I want to telephone to friends to meet me at the next landing."

He blinked at me over his spectacles. "The road to Big Bend is pretty bad."

"They'll make it," I said.

He led me to the telephone in his kitchen. It was one of the wall variety, with a crank to turn to get central. In fifteen seconds I had the office of The Morning Eagle on the wire and asked for Belzer.

I didn't know what the old man's connection might be with Pete and his crew, so I had to be vague in my conversation with the reporter. He seemed to understand.

"Okay, Butch," he said. "I think you picked a funny night to go joy riding down the river, but since it's you. . . . Where do I meet you—Big Bend?"

The old man told me how a car could get to Big Bend and I relayed the instructions to Belzer. I wanted to tell him to bring the police with him, but I remembered my promise to the little cook, and that I wouldn't be telephoning at all if it weren't for the cook.

"You might bring Harvey McGuire with you," I suggested.

I was thinking that I could entice William Calla ashore at Big Bend and the three of us could handle him.

"I'll do better than that," Belzer promised. "Harvey's car couldn't make it in time, but I know one that will."

"You'd better bring a revolver," I told him. "This delta country may not be safe at night."

As I hung up the receiver the old man snorted at my last suggestion. "Safe? Say, I've lived here nigh onto thirty years and—"

"Well, we city fellows are sometimes a little nervous," I told him. "Thanks for the phone."

"Just a minute and I'll walk down to the river with you."

"Sorry, I've got to run. Maybe I'll see you at the boat."

I had to get back on board without attracting attention—which the old man's presence certainly would have directed to me.

I was lucky. The pile of sacks on the wharf was only half gone. I grabbed my hand truck, loaded it in the shadows and rolled it aboard. My fifteen minutes wasn't quite up. I wondered if the cook would think to put out the galley light for me again. He didn't, but he had shielded it so that I climbed back up the stairs unnoticed.

The little man grinned, showing the gaps in his front teeth. "I knew you wouldn't run out on me," he said.

"I should have thought you'd been glad if I didn't come back."

"Not me. Mebbe you don't know it, but I'm supposed to be your jailer, Pete tells me."

Mothers Urged To Keep Diary; Proves Helpful

Reveals Problems, Failures and Successes of Faithful Parent

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Some months ago I quoted in this column from the diary of a mother who happened also to be a newspaper woman. Her diary was an honest effort to record her problems, failures and successes as a parent. As I did then, so would I now urge other mothers to keep diaries and I should like to hear from more who do.

Many teachers, from college presidents to teachers in the nursery school, read this column and write me about the children and youths with whom they deal. Some of these correspondents make very keen observations and present helpful ideas.

Several years ago, one of my readers who teaches in a downtown area of Minneapolis wrote to remind me that many school children come from homes and have parents of a different sort from the ones about which I generally write. Her account of some of the home problems of several of her pupils was so vivid and evinced an insight so penetrating that I wrote her that she should keep a diary recording her observations ,experiences and feelings in relation to these children.

She Did So

She took me seriously. A year later she wrote: "Last fall you suggested that I keep a kind of diary and in it write all sorts of observations and experiences. You also suggested that I send it to you after a year. I did keep a record all last year and I shall be happy to send it if you wish.

"I am so glad I followed your suggestion. It has helped me more than I can tell you. It has helped me clarify the problems I was up against . . .

"It seems to me that I took a long stride forward last year in understanding adolescents, their problems and myself. I believe I never enjoyed a year quite so much nor did I ever get so much out of my efforts. I really believe I forgot myself to a greater degree than I ever had in attempting to teach my youngsters the better way of living and doing. And in back of it all was the notebook into which I knew would go all my experiences."

She sent me a copy of this diary and I have read and re-read all of it with great interest and profit. I wish you might read it, too. You would marvel with me at this teacher's understanding of the children she writes about.

Different This Year

Recently she wrote again: "My diary of this year is much different from that of last. I feel like a snake that has shed his old dry skin and is ready for a newer, better one. Those notes of last year became stepping-stones, I hope, to a wider vision for me. Never again will I have to work out these problems of the children in such a hard way because your way helped me to get a more intelligent understanding of things and I am able to face my days and do my work in a better way . . ."

I received a long letter the other day from a mother out in British Columbia who had written me two years before, and she also told how her diary helped her to understand her children.

Collected Thousands From Gambling Dives

Detroit, April 17 (AP)—A former jeweler testified here that over a period of four and one-half years he collected thousands of dollars in "protection" money from gambling establishments and brothels in Wayne county.

The witness, Sam Block, turning state's evidence in the county graft investigation, said the average monthly "take" was between $4,000 and $5,000 and that the money had been turned over to Harry Colburn, chief investigator for Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea.

Block, on the promise of immunity from Circuit Court Judge Homer Ferguson, had agreed to take the stand at the examination of McCrea, Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox and thirty-one co-defendants on charges of conspiring to protect illegal enterprises. Block also had been named a conspirator.

Economics Board Predicts Upswing

Washington, April 18 (AP)—The bureau of agricultural economics predicted an improvement in general economim conditions by summer.

The bureau's view was set in a statement which noted that the sharp winter downswing in industrial production had leveled off. The Federal Reserve Board concurred in this latter observation with an announcement that the industrial activity rate of decline had slowed down in March and that there was "little further decrease" in the first half of April.

The seasonably adjusted index of industrial production was 103 for March, the board said, compared with the record high of 128 in December, 109 in February and ninety-eight in March, 1939.

THE KILLER SPEAKS

by RICHARD HOUGHTON

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

I CONTINUED to adjust my clothes hanging by the galley stove until I regained my composure. It would not do to let the crew know I recognized my kidnaper among them. They thought I couldn't identify him. They must continue to think so. That was why nothing had been done against me. It was considered perfectly safe to wait.

"We-ell, let's get going," drawled Pete as he rose from the table. "Berger's wharf is just around the bend."

The men filed out the door and down the steps to the main deck of the barge. The big fellow walked stooped over, which I knew was assumed as a disguise.

"How long before we make this landing?" I asked the cook.

"About five minutes."

I looked down the ladder after the men. In the swirling fog I could barely distinguish the crew as dark shapes moving among the potato sacks. Two of them paused to light cigarets and I saw their faces. There was nothing sinister about them.

The cook certainly didn't look like a criminal type. I decided to take a chance on him. "I've got to get off at this landing," I told him. "Will anyone object?"

"We-ell, I don't know. Mebbe it isn't safe. I don't know why, but somebody was trying to kill you a while ago. Mebbe you'd better not leave us."

"You think I'm safer on this boat than ashore alone?"

"How do you know you'd be alone?"

"I think I can take care of that, with your help. I've a feeling I'm not safe here."

"I sure ain't a murderer, if that's what you mean."

"I don't think you are," I reassured him. "I owe my life to the men on this barge, but at the same time I have a feeling that the man who wants to kill me is not a stranger. Am I right?"

The little man was flabbergasted by the question. He looked uneasily at the door. "No-ow, that's a kinda strong thing to say. But I—I guess you're right. We gotta pretty good idea. We ain't going to let him get away with murder, though, not on this boat!"

"That's all I want to know. You'll be glad to have me off the boat?"

"Mebbe that sounds too unfriendly. We don't want no murder, that's all."

"Good. I've got to arrange to get away. I haven't got anything against Pete or you—or this boat. All I need is fifteen minutes ashore, to telephone friends to meet me at the next landing down the river."

"You're not going to call the police?"

"No. And all you need to do is to put out the light long enough for me to get down those stairs. I'll take my chances, and be back in fifteen minutes. Nobody will ever know you helped me."

"It's a go. You're in a tight spot. Mebbe that's the best way out—if you don't call the police."

"Come along with me, if you want."

He shook his head. "That would be worse, if anyone saw me. Get ready. Here's the landing!"

The propeller had been thrown in reverse, and now the chug of the motor died. We staggered as the barge bumped.

The cook blew out the galley lantern, as though the rough landing had effected it, and I ducked out the door and down the stairs. The lantern was quickly lighted again, but I was safe among the piles of sacks.

An electric light burned above the wharf, but its glow was dimmed by the fog. The crew threw out the gangplank and started trundling hand trucks ashore for the waiting pile of sacked potatoes. An idle hand truck stood near me. I grasped the handles and boldly joined the line, keeping my head down.

In the confusion I passed unnoticed. I pushed the truck into the shadows at the far side of the pile, found a hiding place for it and, crouching low, ducked around the corner of a shed. A moment later I was climbing the levee. The hand trucks were busily rumbling back and forth across the gangplank. My flight was not discovered.

A short distance beyond the top of the levee I saw the warm glow of windows in the fog. I found the path to the house and knocked on the door, which was opened immediately by an old man.

"I'll be right with you, cap'n," he said. "You'll find 300 sacks right enough this time." He reached behind him for a lighted lantern.

"I'm not the captain," I explained. "I want to telephone to friends to meet me at the next landing."

He blinked at me over his spectacles. "The road to Big Bend is pretty bad."

"They'll make it," I said.

He led me to the telephone in his kitchen. It was one of the wall variety, with a crank to turn to get central. In fifteen seconds I had the office of The Morning Eagle on the wire and asked for Belzer.

I didn't know what the old man's connection might be with Pete and his crew, so I had to be vague in my conversation with the reporter. He seemed to understand.

"Okay, Butch," he said. "I think you picked a funny night to go joy riding down the river, but since it's you. . . . Where do I meet you—Big Bend?"

The old man told me how a car could get to Big Bend and I relayed the instructions to Belzer. I wanted to tell him to bring the police with him, but I remembered my promise to the little cook, and that I wouldn't be telephoning at all if it weren't for the cook.

"You might bring Harvey McGuire with you," I suggested.

I was thinking that I could entice William Calla ashore at Big Bend and the three of us could handle him.

"I'll do better than that," Belzer promised. "Harvey's car couldn't make it in time, but I know one that will."

"You'd better bring a revolver," I told him. "This delta country may not be safe at night."

As I hung up the receiver the old man snorted at my last suggestion. "Safe? Say, I've lived here nigh onto thirty years and—"

"Well, we city fellows are sometimes a little nervous," I told him. "Thanks for the phone."

"Just a minute and I'll walk down to the river with you."

"Sorry, I've got to run. Maybe I'll see you at the boat."

I had to get back on board without attracting attention—which the old man's presence certainly would have directed to me.

I was lucky. The pile of sacks on the wharf was only half gone. I grabbed my hand truck, loaded it in the shadows and rolled it aboard. My fifteen minutes wasn't quite up. I wondered if the cook would think to put out the galley light for me again. He didn't, but he had shielded it so that I climbed back up the stairs unnoticed.

The little man grinned, showing the gaps in his front teeth. "I knew you wouldn't run out on me," he said.

"I should have thought you'd been glad if I didn't come back."

"Not me. Mebbe you don't know it, but I'm supposed to be your jailer, Pete tells me."

Mothers Urged To Keep Diary; Proves Helpful

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Some months ago I quoted in this column from the diary of a mother who happened also to be a newspaper woman. Her diary was an honest effort to record her problems, failures and successes as a parent. As I did then, so would I now urge other mothers to keep diaries and I should like to hear from more who do.

Many teachers, from college presidents to teachers in the nursery school, read this column and write me about the children and youths with whom they deal. Some of these correspondents make very keen observations and present helpful ideas.

Several years ago, one of my readers who teaches in a downtown area of Minneapolis wrote to remind me that many school children come from homes and have parents of a different sort from the ones about which I generally write. Her account of some of the home problems of several of her pupils was so vivid and evinced an insight so penetrating that I wrote her that she should keep a diary recording her observations ,experiences and feelings in relation to these children.

She Did So

She took me seriously. A year later she wrote: "Last fall you suggested that I keep a kind of diary and in it write all sorts of observations and experiences. You also suggested that I send it to you after a year. I did keep a record all last year and I shall be happy to send it if you wish.

"I am so glad I followed your suggestion. It has helped me more than I can tell you. It has helped me clarify the problems I was up against . . .

"It seems to me that I took a long stride forward last year in understanding adolescents, their problems and myself. I believe I never enjoyed a year quite so much nor did I ever get so much out of my efforts. I really believe I forgot myself to a greater degree than I ever had in attempting to teach my youngsters the better way of living and doing. And in back of it all was the notebook into which I knew would go all my experiences."

She sent me a copy of this diary and I have read and re-read all of it with great interest and profit. I wish you might read it, too. You would marvel with me at this teacher's understanding of the children she writes about.

Different This Year

Recently she wrote again: "My diary of this year is much different from that of last. I feel like a snake that has shed his old dry skin and is ready for a newer, better one. Those notes of last year became stepping-stones, I hope, to a wider vision for me. Never again will I have to work out these problems of the children in such a hard way because your way helped me to get a more intelligent understanding of things and I am able to face my days and do my work in a better way . . ."

I received a long letter the other day from a mother out in British Columbia who had written me two years before, and she also told how her diary helped her to understand her children.

Collected Thousands From Gambling Dives

Detroit, April 17 (AP)—A former jeweler testified here that over a period of four and one-half years he collected thousands of dollars in "protection" money from gambling establishments and brothels in Wayne county.

The witness, Sam Block, turning state's evidence in the county graft investigation, said the average monthly "take" was between $4,000 and $5,000 and that the money had been turned over to Harry Colburn, chief investigator for Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea.

Block, on the promise of immunity from Circuit Court Judge Homer Ferguson, had agreed to take the stand at the examination of McCrea, Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox and thirty-one co-defendants on charges of conspiring to protect illegal enterprises. Block also had been named a conspirator.

Italian Develops Washing Machine To Turn Beaches into Iron Mines

AP Feature Service

Here's the start of an idea that Italy hopes will help make it independent of imported steel—a hand-operated machine for recovering iron from the sands along Italian beaches. Coastal sands near Rome are known to be rich in iron. In an hour's test of this device more than a ton of magnetite which was 96 per cent pure iron, is said to have been recovered. Sand is washed through the machine and the iron retrieved by an arrangement of magnets. It is the aim of the inventor, an engineer named Giovanni Liguori, to distribute the machines, free, to people living near the coast so that these people can improve their lot—and Italy can gain supplies of iron. Mussolini has tried out the machine.

Physicians Force Tuberculosis into Open by X-Ray

Origin of Various Tests over Period of Years Is Explained

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

A young Austrian doctor puzzled about how to tell when there was disease in the chest. He had been treating a patient who had no very striking symptoms, but when he died his lungs were found riddled with tuberculosis. The chest seldom shows pain to guide in a diagnosis as does the abdomen, and its stiff walls prevent one from feeling anything beneath it.

Finally he hit on the idea that a barrel containing air makes a different sound when struck than when full of liquid or flour. The chest normally is full of air, but when tuberculosis comes the air cells are infiltrated with solid matter. He tried out this idea by tapping the chest to elicit a sound, and so we have the method of percussion to discover densities in the chest.

Later another young doctor, a Frenchman, saw some children in the park playing the game of transmitting messages by scratching with a pin at one end of a board while the receiver of the message listened with his ear glued to the other end. The idea flashed into his mind that he might hear the sounds made by the lungs by placing a hollow tube against the chest wall and listening at the other end. He tried it and the stethoscope was born.

These methods allowed doctors to make a diagnosis of tuberculosis, and they are still used. But some cases escape them, especially very early cases.

Later, in 1882, when the German, Koch, discovered the cause of tuberculosis, the tubercle bacillus, he pointed out that it is present in the sputum of patients with the disease. But this procedure too often fails in early cases.

The tuberculin skin test, introduced by Pirquet in 1907, is reliable for early tuberculosis but does not tell where the tuberculosis is.

The National Tuberculosis Association has asked that during April particular attention be called to the use of the x-ray in the diagnosis of tuberculosis. The x-ray is particularly valuable in finding tuberculosis which cannot be suspected by any other means.

The value of the x-ray is that the examination can be done rapidly, and that it detects a case in an early stage when it cannot be recognized otherwise. It can be applied to large groups of an apparently healthy population, such as schools, nursing schools, workers in industrial plants, soldiers in the army. It results in a higher percentage of early, accurate diagnosis than any other method. Tuberculosis does not occur exclusively in the lungs, but the x-ray will detect it in bones and other organs.

The test is a great advantage to workers in industry. Young women in the unskilled labor groups furnish more victims of tuberculosis than any other occupational groups.

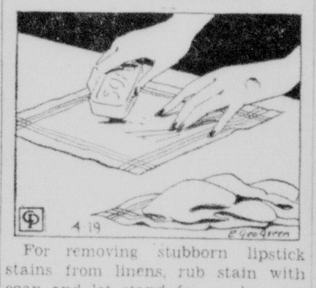

Not so very long ago tuberculosis of the lungs was called "consumption," and it was not recognized that a person had consumption until he became an emaciated, cough-racked, expectorating physical wreck. We see few cases of "consumption" of this kind nowadays.

Questions and Answers

R. M. J.: "Is either cockleburr tea or alfalfa of advantage in the treatment of diabetes?"

Answer—No. On the contrary, distinctly disadvantageous because the patient tends to neglect the essential forms of treatment. Diet and insulin are the only methods of treatment that can be recommended.

Italian Develops Washing Machine To Turn Beaches into Iron Mines

AP Feature Service

Here's the start of an idea that Italy hopes will help make it independent of imported steel—a hand-operated machine for recovering iron from the sands along Italian beaches. Coastal sands near Rome are known to be rich in iron. In an hour's test of this device more than a ton of magnetite which was 96 per cent pure iron, is said to have been recocered. Sand is washed through the machine and the iron retrieved by an arrangement of magnets. It is the aim of the inventor, an engineer named Giovanni Liguori, to distribute the machines, free, to people living near the coast so that these people can improve their lot—and Italy can gain supplies of iron. Mussolini has tried out the machine.

Physicians Force Tuberculosis into Open by X-Ray

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

A young Austrian doctor puzzled about how to tell when there was disease in the chest. He had been treating a patient who had no very striking symptoms, but when he died his lungs were found riddled with tuberculosis. The chest seldom shows pain to guide in a diagnosis as does the abdomen, and its stiff walls prevent one from feeling anything beneath it.

Finally he hit on the idea that a barrel containing air makes a different sound when struck than when full of liquid or flour. The chest normally is full of air, but when tuberculosis comes the air cells are infiltrated with solid matter. He tried out this idea by tapping the chest to elicit a sound, and so we have the method of percussion to discover densities in the chest.

Later another young doctor, a Frenchman, saw some children in the park playing the game of transmitting messages by scratching with a pin at one end of a board while the receiver of the message listened with his ear glued to the other end. The idea flashed into his mind that he might hear the sounds made by the lungs by placing a hollow tube against the chest wall and listening at the other end. He tried it and the stethoscope was born.

These methods allowed doctors to make a diagnosis of tuberculosis, and they are still used. But some cases escape them, especially very early cases.

Later, in 1882, when the German, Koch, discovered the cause of tuberculosis, the tubercle bacillus, he pointed out that it is present in the sputum of patients with the disease. But this procedure too often fails in early cases.

The tuberculin skin test, introduced by Pirquet in 1907, is reliable for early tuberculosis but does not tell where the tuberculosis is.

The National Tuberculosis Association has asked that during April particular attention be called to the use of the x-ray in the diagnosis of tuberculosis. The x-ray is particularly valuable in finding tuberculosis which cannot be suspected by any other means.

The value of the x-ray is that the examination can be done rapidly, and that it detects a case in an early stage when it cannot be recognized otherwise. It can be applied to large groups of an apparently healthy population, such as schools, nursing schools, workers in industrial plants, soldiers in the army. It results in a higher percentage of early, accurate diagnosis than any other method. Tuberculosis does not occur exclusively in the lungs, but the x-ray will detect it in bones and other organs.

The test is a great advantage to workers in industry. Young women in the unskilled labor groups furnish more victims of tuberculosis than any other occupational groups.

Not so very long ago tuberculosis of the lungs was called "consumption," and it was not recognized that a person had consumption until he became an emaciated, cough-racked, expectorating physical wreck. We see few cases of "consumption" of this kind nowadays.

Questions and Answers

R. M. J.: "Is either cockleburr tea or alfalfa of advantage in the treatment of diabetes?"

Answer—No. On the contrary, distinctly disadvantageous because the patient tends to neglect the essential forms of treatment. Diet and insulin are the only methods of treatment that can be recommended.

WIFE PRESERVERS

For removing stubborn lipstick stains from linens, rub stain with soap and let stand for an hour or so. Then wash article in usual way. If stain still remains, sponge it with hydrogen peroxide and rinse at once in cold water.

Klan Unmasks As Flogging Trials Get Under Way

Atlanta, April 18 (AP) — National officers of the Ku Klux Klan decreed unmasking for the hooded order here while trial of seventeen men in connection with the night-rider flogging terrorism began here.

Imperial Wizard James A. Colescott, after a five-day parley with the Imperial Kloncilium (directorate), issued edicts banning the peep-holed white visor from Klan regalia, restricting parades and burning of the "fiery cross," Klan emblem.

Almost simultaneously with Colescott's announcement, the Fulton county superior court opened trial of Henry Cauthon, first of seventeen members and former members of a suburban Klan unit to face a jury after several weeks' grand jury investigation precipitated by the flogging death of Isaac Gaston, a barber.

Cauthon, truck driver, was charged with assault and battery, a misdemeanor, in connection with the non-fatal whippings of sixteen persons.

Colescott denied the Klan edicts were prompted by the flog investigations and asserted the current trial had "nothing whatever to do with it."

Officials hoped removal of masks would "discourage non-members from using Klan robes to cover criminal actions—as has been done in many instances."

Under the edicts, a Klansman may not appear "in public or in private with his face hidden by a mask." Violation is "punishable by banishment."

Klan Unmasks As Flogging Trials Get Under Way

Atlanta, April 18 (AP) — National officers of the Ku Klux Klan decreed unmasking for the hooded order here while trial of seventeen men in connection with the night-rider flogging terrorism began here.

Imperial Wizard James A. Colescott, after a five-day parley with the Imperial Kloncilium (directorate), issued edicts banning the peep-holed white visor from Klan regalia, restricting parades and burning of the fiery cross, Klan emblem.

Almost simultaneously with Colescott's announcement, the Fulton county superior court opened trial of Henry Cauthon, first of seventeen members and former members of a suburban Klan unit to face a jury after several weeks' grand jury investigation precipitated by the flogging death of Isaac Gaston, a barber.

Cauthon, truck driver, was charged with assault and battery, a misdemeanor, in connection with the non-fatal whippings of sixteen persons.

Colescott denied the Klan edicts were prompted by the flog investigations and asserted the current trial had "nothing whatever to do with it."

Officials hoped removal of masks would "discourage non-members from using Klan robes to cover criminal actions—as has been done in many instances."

Under the edicts, a Klansman may not appear "in public or in private with his face hidden by a mask." Violation is "punishable by banishment."

Membership Drive of Frostburg Legion Nears Goal of 200

Farrady Post Ups Objective to 225; Rally Is Planned

191 Members Already Enrolled; Community Service Is Cited

Frostburg, April 18—Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, Frostburg's oldest ex-service men's organization, is conducting a membership drive which will end April 28. The goal had been set at 200 members, but since 191 members have already been enrolled, the membership campaign committee, consisting of Roy Sleeman, Hugh Wilson, Arthur Norris, William Festerman and Joseph Carter, is striving to secure at least 225 members.

At the conclusion of the drive, the post will hold a rally to celebrate the biggest membership year in the history of the organization. The rally will be featured by the presence of State Commander James Fitzgerald, of Chevy Chase, who will deliver the address, outlining aims of the Maryland department for the remainder of the current year.

Recent accomplishments of the Post along the line of community service is being exploited by the campaign committee to secure new members, the committee pointing out that the Legion is trying to boost its prestige in the community by unselfish service for the common good. Particular emphasis is being placed on the fact that the gift of a modern mobile x-ray unit, costing $1,455, to Miners hospital was made possible from funds raised at a bazaar held last November under American Legion sponsorship.

When the new x-ray machine was officially presented to the hospital recently, announcement was made by the Legion committee that a bazaar would be held every year to secure funds for additional equipment for the hospital.

In addition to its work along the line of community service, the Legion is working constantly to secure for disabled veterans and widows and orphans of veterans benefits to which they are entitled under existing law, and are also working with other posts of the Department of Maryland to have the provisions of the law liberated so as to extend further benefits.

The speaker at the worship service at 2:45 p. m. will be Dr. G. L. Roth, of Somerset, Pa. Special music is being planned by young people's choirs from Hyndman and Grantsville. The former group will sing an arrangement of Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

The worship service will be followed by a period of fellowship and an organization meeting.

Others in the picture are Dr. Harry Teter and the Rev. W. D. Reese, members of the hospital board; Miss Anna Lint, hospital superintendent; Mrs. Edward J. Ryan, Mrs. Elizabeth Odgers, Mrs. Daniel Price, Mrs. Marshall Skidmore, Mrs. Mary Powell, Mrs. Polly Alexander, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. Dave Kiddy and Mrs. Margaret Lancaster.

Five Held As Burglars Of Deep Creek Cottages

Oakland, April 18 — The many robberies of cottages and summer places along the shores of Deep Creek Lake may be cleared up as the result of a round-up of five persons by county and state authorities. The arrests, although made last Saturday, were just announced today by State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley.

The announcement will be welcome news to numerous property owners in that part of the county, who for the past several years have been subject to losses of clothing, furniture and other household articles, some of them amounting in value to several hundred dollars.

Officers have arrested Charles R. Savedge, Deer Park; James Hugh Bray, Mrs. Hager Hamilton, Gus Weicht and Mrs. Tom Moore, all of near Swanton. Savedge, Bray and Mrs. Hamilton are all being held on charges of breaking and entering and larceny, while Mrs. Moore and Weicht are being held for "further investigation."

State's Attorney Fraley said Bray had confessed to having entered five summer homes at Green Glade at various times during the fall and winter. These were the cottages of Robert R. Ritchie, Lonaconing; Dr. Wilson, H. O. Failing, Robert Welch and Mr. Ferrell, of the Tri-Towns section. A portion of the articles stolen have been identified and recovered. Mr. Fraley said, having been in the possession of Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Moore. Mrs. Hamilton declares she received what she had from Savedge, according to Mr. Fraley, but thus far Savedge has denied having anything to do with the robberies.

Articles such as fishing poles and tackle, bed clothing, blankets, kitchen utensiles, personal clothing, furniture, outboard motors and batteries of electric light plants have been taken from these and other properties, according to the owners. The motors, batteries, etc., salable as junk, have been disposed of and there is a possibility that these sales will be traced. Some of the missing articles were also recovered in Keyser and nearby towns, some of them at Deer Park and other places.

"The investigation indicates that the crimes have been committed over a period of several months, perhaps longer, and we suspect the persons now in jail of working with at least one other gang that has committed robberies along other sections of the lake shore," Mr. Fraley said. "We hope that when the investigation is completed a number of other robberies of lake property will be cleared up."

All those now under arrest in connection with the Green Glade thievery will be given hearings within a few days before Magistrate Charles F. White in Oakland.

There are now about 250 or 300 cottages along the shores of Deep Creek Lake, which has a shoreline of about seventy-five miles, and there is no effective way thus far to have them watched. Many of them are off the main roads, and in the woods along the shore.

Membership Drive of Frostburg Legion Nears Goal of 200

Farrady Post Ups Objective to 225; Rally Is Planned

191 Members Already Enrolled; Community Service Is Cited

Frostburg, April 18—Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, Frostburg's oldest ex-service men's organization, is conducting a membership drive which will end April 28. The goal had been set at 200 members, but since 191 members have already been enrolled, the membership campaign committee, consisting of Roy Sleeman, Hugh Wilson, Arthur Norris, William Festerman and Joseph Carter, is striving to secure at least 225 members.

At the conclusion of the drive, the post will hold a rally to celebrate the biggest membership year in the history of the organization. The rally will be featured by the presence of State Commander James Fitzgerald, of Chevy Chase, who will deliver the address, outlining aims of the Maryland department for the remainder of the current year.

Recent accomplishments of the Post along the line of community service is being exploited by the campaign committee to secure new members, the committee pointing out that the Legion is trying to boost its prestige in the community by unselfish service for the common good. Particular emphasis is being placed on the fact that the gift of a modern mobile x-ray unit, costing $1,455, to Miners hospital was made possible from funds raised at a bazaar held last November under American Legion sponsorship.

When the new x-ray machine was officially presented to the hospital recently, announcement was made by the Legion committee that a bazaar would be held every year to secure funds for additional equipment for the hospital.

In addition to its work along the line of community service, the Legion is working constantly to secure for disabled veterans and widows and orphans of veterans benefits to which they are entitled under existing law, and are also working with other posts of the Department of Maryland to have the provisions of the law liberated so as to extend further benefits.

Others in the picture are Dr. Harry Teter and the Rev. W. D. Reese, members of the hospital board; Miss Anna Lint, hospital superintendent; Mrs. Edward J. Ryan, Mrs. Elizabeth Odgers, Mrs. Daniel Price, Mrs. Marshall Skidmore, Mrs. Mary Powell, Mrs. Polly Alexander, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. Dave Kiddy and Mrs. Margaret Lancaster.

Five Held As Burglars Of Deep Creek Cottages

Oakland, April 18 — The many robberies of cottages and summer places along the shores of Deep Creek Lake may be cleared up as the result of a round-up of five persons by county and state authorities. The arrests, although made last Saturday, were just announced today by State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley.

The announcement will be welcome news to numerous property owners in that part of the county who for the past several years have been subject to losses of clothing, furniture and other household articles, some of them amounting in value to several hundred dollars.

Officers have arrested Charles R. Savedge, Deer Park; James Hugh Bray, Mrs. Hager Hamilton, Gus Weicht and Mrs. Tom Moore, all of near Swanton. Savedge, Bray and Mrs. Hamilton are all being held on charges of breaking and entering and larceny, while Mrs. Moore and Weicht are being held for "further investigation."

State's Attorney Fraley said Bray had confessed to having entered five summer homes at Green Glade at various times during the fall and winter. These were the cottages of Robert R. Ritchie, Lonaconing; Dr. Wilson, H. O. Failing, Robert Welch and Mr. Ferrell, of the Tri-Towns section. A portion of the articles stolen have been identified and recovered. Mr. Fraley said, having been in the possession of Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Moore. Mrs. Hamilton declares she received what she had from Savedge, according to Mr. Fraley, but thus far Savedge has denied having anything to do with the robberies.

Articles such as fishing poles and tackle, bed clothing, blankets, kitchen utensiles, personal clothing, furniture, outboard motors and batteries of electric light plants have been taken from these and other properties, according to the owners. The motors, batteries, etc., salable as junk, have been disposed of and there is a possibility that these sales will be traced. Some of the missing articles were also recovered in Keyser and nearby towns, some of them at Deer Park and other places.

"The investigation indicates that the crimes have been committed over a period of several months, perhaps longer, and we suspect the persons now in jail of working with at least one other gang that has committed robberies along other sections of the lake shore," Mr. Fraley said. "We hope that when the investigation is completed a number of other robberies of lake property will be cleared up."

All those now under arrest in connection with the Green Glade thievery will be given hearings within a few days before Magistrate Charles F. White in Oakland.

There are now about 250 or 300 cottages along the shores of Deep Creek Lake, which has a shoreline of about seventy-five miles, and there is no effective way thus far to have them watched. Many of them are off the main roads, and in the woods along the shore.

Veteran Blaze-Battlers Honored at Coney for Long Service

Gifts Presented Douglas Waddell, Edward Stevenson

500 Attend Anniversary Celebration of Goodwill Fire Company

Lonaconing, April 18 — Two veteran "blaze battlers" were signally honored here tonight by members of Goodwill Fire Company No. 1 at the fifty-fourth anniversary celebration of the company held in Firemen's armory, Star avenue. More than 500 persons attended.

The firemen honored were Edward Stevenson and Douglas Waddell, active members of the company for forty-eight years. Both were presented with easy chairs and foot rests, in recognition of their long membership and services to this volunteer fire department. They are the two oldest active firemen in the State of Maryland.

The presentation was made by George Eichhorn, toastmaster, and chief engineer of the department. Mr. Eichhorn paid high tribute to these veteran firemen for their service to the community for nearly a half-century. Mr. Eichhorn also spoke of many humorous incidents concerning this pair at fires, celebrations and conventions. Both responded briefly.

Mr. Stevenson, the oldest active member of the company, has served the Maryland State Firemen's Association on two different occasions —first as treasurer for two years and then as secretary during 1911 and 1912. At the present time he is secretary of the Allegany-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association. This position Mr. Stevenson has held for the last nineteen years. For forty-three of the forty-eight years he has been a member of Goodwill, company he has served as its secretary.

Mr. Waddell, more familiarly known to his friends in the state firemen's association as "Doug", served as chief of the local company for twenty-seven years. Although selected to lead the local firemen again, Mr. Waddell relinquished the post in favor of a younger member who he believed could best serve the interest of the community and the department.

Mr. Waddell was and still is regarded as one of the most fearless firemen ever to don a fireman's garb. Never in his career as a fireman has he allowed any of his men to enter a dangerous spot unless he first investigated himself. His word was always law.

Mr. Waddell is a member of the Lonaconing city council and a private coal operator. He joined the fire company Nov. 9, 1892.

Speakers included Paul Fletcher, Cumberland attorney and former magistrate; Mayor Harry Irvine of Cumberland; Percy L. Reinwall, of Easton, president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association; Fire Chief George Mayer Jr. of Easton; and R. E. Rosenbarger, president of the Meyersdale, Pa., fire department.

Mr. Fletcher, the principal speaker, discussed the origin and benefit of volunteer fire departments and recalled events of his boyhood days in nearby Moscow.

A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, wired his regrets at being unable to be present.

Dancing and refreshments followed the formal program.

Both were presented with easy chairs and foot rests, in recognition of their long membership and services to this volunteer fire department. They are the two oldest active firemen in the State of Maryland.

The presentation was made by George Eichhorn, toastmaster, and chief engineer of the department. Mr. Eichhorn paid high tribute to these veteran firemen for their service to the community for nearly a half-century. Mr. Eichhorn also spoke of many humorous incidents concerning this pair at fires, celebrations and conventions. Both responded briefly.

Mr. Stevenson, the oldest active member of the company, has served the Maryland State Firemen's Association on two different occasions —first as treasurer for two years and then as secretary during 1911 and 1912. At the present time he is secretary of the Allegany-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association. This position Mr. Stevenson has held for the last nineteen years. For forty-three of the forty-eight years he has been a member of Goodwill, company he has served as its secretary.

Mr. Waddell, more familiarly known to his friends in the state firemen's association as "Doug", served as chief of the local company for twenty-seven years. Although selected to lead the local firemen again, Mr. Waddell relinquished the post in favor of a younger member who he believed could best serve the interest of the community and the department.

Mr. Waddell was and still is regarded as one of the most fearless firemen ever to don a fireman's garb. Never in his career as a fireman has he allowed any of his men to enter a dangerous spot unless he first investigated himself. His word was always law.

Mr. Waddell is a member of the Lonaconing city council and a private coal operator. He joined the fire company Nov. 9, 1892.

Speakers included Paul Fletcher, Cumberland attorney and former magistrate; Mayor Harry Irvine of Cumberland; Percy L. Reinwall, of Easton, president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association; Fire Chief George Mayer Jr. of Easton; and R. E. Rosenbarger, president of the Meyersdale, Pa., fire department.

Mr. Fletcher, the principal speaker, discussed the origin and benefit of volunteer fire departments and recalled events of his boyhood days in nearby Moscow.

A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, wired his regrets at being unable to be present.

Dancing and refreshments followed the formal program.

"Passengers are requested to sleep in their clothes for the first forty-eight hours after leaving England," shipboard notices warner.

Passengers were also instructed not to lock their cabins and to be punctual at meal times—the latter, it was explained because water-tight doors had to be opened when the dining room was being used.

Wyoming Makes Ready for Tourist Invasion on Fiftieth Anniversary

State's Golden Jubilee to Emphasize How Little Frontier Country Has Changed

Celebrating its fiftieth anniversary of statehood, Wyoming is preparing for an influx of tourists who will view its scenic beauty, watch its rodeos.

By JACK SELLERRS
Central Press Correspondent

Casper, Wyo., April 19 — This year Wyoming celebrates its fiftieth anniversary of statehood. Although the buffalo which once roamed its plains by the millions are gone, it continues to be a frontier country of open range and great wilderness areas.

Wyoming's popularity with the host of tourists who yearly visit its Yellowstone and Grant Teton parks and other scenic wonderlands, its rodeos and its dude ranches, emphasizes how little the state has changed since territorial days.

Travel today flows over 3,000 miles of smooth, oil-paved highways which in recent times have replaced the historic trails of yesterday. As the Oregon, the Mormon and the Overland trails, these same routes at one time carried the greatest migration in the nation's history. Still landmarks along these hallowed highways are the old forts, the Indian battlefields and the marked graves of the pioneer era.

The State's First Governor

Wyoming was admitted to the Union in July, 1890. The late Senator Francis E. Warren was the first governor. It claimed 100,000 citizens at the time, but actual census figures gave the infant state a population of 62,555—and 1,850 of these were Indians.

The historic telegram received on July 10 just 50 years ago by Acting Governor John W. Meldrum from Congressman Joseph M. Carey, read:

Washington, D. C.

Proclaim to the people that Wyoming is a member of the indestructible union of American states. To them heartiest congratulations. The president signed the bill at 5:30 p. m. Washington time.

Female suffrage had its origin in Wyoming, which permitted its women to vote a half-century before the nineteenth amendment to the constitution was ratified in 1919. The Wyoming suffrage law was enacted on Dec. 19, 1869, by the territorial legislature.

An official celebration of the Golden Jubilee is scheduled by the special anniversary committee to coincide with the annual Frontier Days rodeo in Cheyenne, on July 25. There will be local observances in every county in the state. Mayors have been asked to serve, school co-operation has been enlisted, and all civic, veteran, patriotic, lodge and service groups expect to participate in some way. Commemoration of historical incidents, marking sites, tributes to pioneers and presentation of pageants and exhibits are on the statewide program.

Many Dedications

Major observances during the year will include:

Dedication of Fort Supply.

Dedication of Hills monument in Green river valley.

Annual meeting of Oregon Trail Memorial association at Jackson.

Erection of monument at Lake DeSmet.

Dedication of Connor Battlefield monument at Ranchester.

Dedication at Lusk of marker on old Texas cattle trail.

Dedication of monument at Daniel, in Green river valley, on first Sunday in July, marking 100th anniversary of Father DeSmet's first service in Wyoming at "the Prairie of the Mass."

Dedication of Turpin Meadows monument in Jackson Hole.

Removal of Woodruff cabin, oldest monument in Big Horn Basin, to Thermopolis.

Dedication of monument to John (Portugee) Phillips, at Fort Phil Kearny, now partially restored.

New Fashion Note On Ocean Liners

New York, April 18 (AP)—A new fashion note for trans-Atlantic voyages was disclosed with the arrival of the British liner Scythia.

"Passengers are requested to sleep in their clothes for the first forty-eight hours after leaving England," shipboard notices warner.

Passengers were also instructed not to lock their cabins and to be punctual at meal times—the latter, it was explained because water-tight doors had to be opened when the dining room was being used.

Once they whispered "I am so sorry"

"Now they admire" ..for a Clear Skin rich, red blood cells will help you

"I WAS determined to have a clear skin. Someone told me of S.S.S. . . . now I am happy . . . I found the way to build from within."

Everyone wants to win and hold friends. Whatever local treatment you use for your complexion . . . remember skin health—natural glow—is dependent on the full strength of red blood. Paleness, quick fatigue, a general run-down condition, underweight (in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection) may be due to (1) lack of assimilation of food (2) weakened blood. If this is also true after middle life,

For generations S.S.S., a blood tonic and stomachic, has been helping people gain new strength . . . better health . . . more happiness.

S.S.S. record of accomplishment warrants your giving it a good trial. Why not start taking it today. You will soon observe improvement and will be happy with the results obtained. The larger size represents a saving in the purchase price. S.S.S. Co.

Wyoming Makes Ready for Tourist Invasion on Fiftieth Anniversary

State's Golden Jubilee to Emphasize How Little Frontier Country Has Changed

Celebrating its fiftieth anniversary of statehood, Wyoming is preparing for an influx of tourists who will view its scenic beauty, watch its rodeos.

By JACK SELLERRS
Central Press Correspondent

Casper, Wyo., April 19 — This year Wyoming celebrates its fiftieth anniversary of statehood. Although the buffalo which once roamed its plains by the millions are gone, it continues to be a frontier country of open range and great wilderness areas.

Wyoming's popularity with the host of tourists who yearly visit its Yellowstone and Grant Teton parks and other scenic wonderlands, its rodeos and its dude ranches, emphasizes how little the state has changed since territorial days.

Travel today flows over 3,000 miles of smooth, oil-paved highways which in recent times have replaced the historic trails of yesterday. As the Oregon, the Mormon and the Overland trails, these same routes at one time carried the greatest migration in the nation's history. Still landmarks along these hallowed highways are the old forts, the Indian battlefields and the marked graves of the pioneer era.

The State's First Governor

Wyoming was admitted to the Union in July, 1890. The late Senator Francis E. Warren was the first governor. It claimed 100,000 citizens at the time, but actual census figures gave the infant state a population of 62,555—and 1,850 of these were Indians.

The historic telegram received on July 10 just 50 years ago by Acting Governor John W. Meldrum from Congressman Joseph M. Carey, read:

Washington, D. C.

Proclaim to the people that Wyoming is a member of the indestructible union of American states. To them heartiest congratulations. The president signed the bill at 5:30 p. m. Washington time.

Female suffrage had its origin in Wyoming, which permitted its women to vote a half-century before the nineteenth amendment to the constitution was ratified in 1919. The Wyoming suffrage law was enacted on Dec. 19, 1869, by the territorial legislature.

An official celebration of the Golden Jubilee is scheduled by the special anniversary committee to coincide with the annual Frontier Days rodeo in Cheyenne, on July 25. There will be local observances in every county in the state. Mayors have been asked to serve, school co-operation has been enlisted, and all civic, veteran, patriotic, lodge and service groups expect to participate in some way. Commemoration of historical incidents, marking sites, tributes to pioneers and presentation of pageants and exhibits are on the statewide program.

Many Dedications

Major observances during the year will include:

Dedication of Fort Supply.

Dedication of Hills monument in Green river valley.

Annual meeting of Oregon Trail Memorial association at Jackson.

Erection of monument at Lake DeSmet.

Dedication of Connor Battlefield monument at Ranchester.

Erection of marker at Sundance, an old trail to Black Hills.

Dedication at Lusk of marker on old Texas cattle trail.

Dedication of monument at Daniel, in Green river valley, on first Sunday in July, marking 100th anniversary of Father DeSmet's first service in Wyoming at "the Prairie of the Mass."

Dedication of Turpin Meadows monument in Jackson Hole.

Removal of Woodruff cabin, oldest monument in Big Horn Basin, to Thermopolis.

Dedication of monument to John (Portugee) Phillips, at Fort Phil Kearny, now partially restored.

Mrs. Dorothy Selby Obtains Divorce

Portsmouth, O., April 18 (AP) — Mrs. Dorothy Selby obtained an uncontested divorce here in Scioto county Commons Pleas court from Roger A. Selby, president of the Selby Shoe Company and a past president of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association.

The court announced a property settlement and provisions for custody of the two Selby children had been agreed upon. Mrs. Selby was reported to have received a $100,000 settlement.

Late Selling in the Stock Market Lowers Prices from 1 to 2 Points

Traders Confused over Tangled European War Situation

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, April 18 (AP) — A late selling blast knocked over leading stocks 1 to more than 2 points in today's market when earlier rallying specialties failed to attract support elsewhere. There were several wider declines.

Offerings at the last were extensive in steels, rubbers and aircrafts.

The closing upset was attributed partly to European war news which left many traders confused. Business news at home was fairly constructive, but hardly sufficient to spur buyers.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off 4 of a point at 49.7. It was the sixth consecutive session in which the composite had been down or unchanged. Transfers amounted to 1,205,250 shares against 902,010 yesterday.

U. S. Rubber preferred tumbled 13 points to 101, a new year's bottom, and the common was off 2⅝ to 32⅞. Fears of what might happen in the Dutch East Indies, where the company has large holdings, were said to have been the principal influence.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Youngstown skidded upon reports price cuts in metal products possibly would soon be restored.

Aluminum of America fell 5¾ points in the Curb and lesser sliders included American Gas and Sherwin Williams. Tilting slightly forward were Creole Petroleum and American Cyanamid "B". The turnover here was around 324,000 shares compared with 264,000 the day before.

Nurse and Doctor Have Romance in Picture

A mutual consecration to the science of healing establishes the bond between a nurse and a surgeon and motivates the romantic interest in "Vigil in the Night," starting tomorrow at the New Liberty theater.

Powerful drama in this A. J. Cronin story also revolves around the stirring events that befall the nurse when she shoulders the blame for the criminal negligence of her sister, who is a student nurse.

Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley teamed for the first time in a picture, are starred in the leading roles, which call for particularly vivid and forceful delineation.

The stars are supported by Julien Mitchell as a wealthy politician whose greed cripples hospital's efficiency. Robert Coote as a doctor, Brenda Forbes, Rita Page, Emily Fitzroy and Ethel Griffies as nurses and Peter Cushing as the hysterical husband of the nurse who gave her life to right a mistake.

George Stevens produced and directed "Vigil in the Night," which is an adaptation by Fred Guinol, P. J. Wolfson and Rowland Leigh of an A. J. Cronin novel that ran serially in Good Housekeeping magazine.

Krupa and Orchestra Are at Strand Today

Gene Krupa and his orchestra will appear at the Strand today only through auspices of Music Corporation of America.

Krupa will be remembered as the drummer who was with Benny Goodman, and who left Benny to start his own band. Riding on a wave of popularity, his performance in "Some Like It Hot," in which he starred with Bob Hope and Shirley Ross, entrenched him firmly in the hearts of the madcap dancers of today.

Known as the "King of the Hide-Beaters", Krupa has been selected on several all-American swing orchestras, including the recent "best" team by Paul Whiteman.

The screen attraction showing with this great attraction is Paramount's "Emergency Squad."

Autry Film Opens Today at Garden

The popular singing western star, Gene Autry opens today at the Garden in "Blue Montana Skies." Supporting Autry are Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Tully Marshall and Walter Schrum's Colorado Hillbillies.

Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver are a typical American couple in "The Honeymoon's Over," Twentieth Century-Fox comedy also showing at the Garden.

It's a down-to-earth comedy full of incidents, experiences and adventures that might happen to anyone of his neighbor in Blanktown.

The story presents the Todds as a misguided young couple who live beyond their means.

As a struggling young advertising man who gets further into trouble by trying to extricate his wife from her innocent financial jams, Stuart Erwin, master of the bewildered grin, has a humanly funny role. He losts his job, is threatened by a jail term and is victimized by fair-weather friends before he lands on his feet.

IN "REBECCA"

Joan Fontaine as she is seen in the Selznick International production of "Rebecca," now showing at the Maryland theater, and co-starring Laurence Olivier.

Small Girl Provides Action in Picture

"Heroes of the Saddle," a Three Mesquiteers production is at the Embassy theater for a run of two days, starting today.

The cause of all the action is a small girl, Peggy, whose father, a pal of the Mesquiteers, is killed in a rodeo exhibition.

Frustrated in their attempts to legally adopt her, the Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo,) to become her "uncles" and watch over her welfare in the orphanage to which she has been committed.

On one of their visits they discover that her foot has been injured in a mysterious accident. When she attempts to explain it to them, she is abruptly silenced by Melloney, the superintendent, and the Mesquiteers' suspicions are aroused.

Visiting the orphanage as a "masked rider," one of the boys discovers that the bosses of the institution are exploiting the children in a basement factory under sweatshop conditions, and Peggy's foot injury resulted from dropping of heavy machinery which she was forced to carry.

When the boys attempted to expose this condition, they find themselves up against a formidable array of gangsters, politicians and crooks.

Film Play of Novel Is at the Maryland

David O. Selznick's production of "Rebecca," based on the best selling Daphne du Maurier novel, is on view at the Maryland theater.

Heading this line-up are Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, who plays the starring roles, while in their support are Judith Anderson, C. Aubrey Smith, George Sanders, Nigel Bruce, Florence Bates and Gladys Coper.

Oliver is cast as Maxim de Winter, a prominent society man who is famous for his vast Tudor estate called Manderley. To this house he brings his second wife, played by Miss Fontaine, a shy and unsophisticated person who can hardly be compared to the glittering and brilliant former mistress of Manderly, Rebecca, now dead. But though Rebecca is dead, her forceful personality and dramatic beauty still continue to dominate Manderley and to haunt the lives of those who wander through its immense rooms.

Judith Anderson appears as the sadistically cruel Mrs. Danvers.

HAS APPEALING ROLE

Carole Lombard has an appealing part as Nurse Anne Lee in "Vigil in the Night" starting tomorrow at the New Liberty theater, with Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley sharing stellar honors.

Late Selling in the Stock Market Lowers Prices from 1 to 2 Points

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, April 18 (AP) — A late selling blast knocked over leading stocks 1 to more than 2 points in today's market when earlier rallying specialties failed to attract support elsewhere. There were several wider declines.

Offerings at the last were extensive in steels, rubbers and aircrafts.

The closing upset was attributed partly to European war news which left many traders confused. Business news at home was fairly constructive, but hardly sufficient to spur buyers.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .4 of a point at 49.7. It was the sixth consecutive session in which the composite had been down or unchanged. Transfers amounted to 1,205,250 shares against 902,010 yesterday.

U. S. Rubber preferred tumbled 13 points to 101, a new year's bottom, and the common was off 2⅝ to 32⅞. Fears of what might happen in the Dutch East Indies, where the company has large holdings, were said to have been the principal influence.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Youngstown skidded upon reports price cuts in metal products possibly would soon be restored.

Aluminum of America fell 5¾ points in the Curb and lesser sliders included American Gas and Sherwin Williams. Tilting slightly forward were Creole Petroleum and American Cyanamid "B". The turnover here was around 324,000 shares compared with 264,000 the day before.

Cincinnati Sweeps Series with Chicago

Gene Thompson Is In Top Form until Ninth To Win 2 to 1

Young Red Hurler Shows Great Form To Top Claude Passeau

Cub Pitcher also Shows Winning Form but Is Defeated

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP)—Magnificent five-hit hurling by young Gene Thompson, plus successive eighth-inning doubles by rookie Mike McCormick and Billy Myers with a man on base, gave the Reds a series-sweeping 2 to 1 victory over Chicago's Cubs today.

The cold, damp day, better suited to touchdowns than base hits, found both Thompson and Claude Passeau in mid-Summer form before an overcoated crowd of 1,536.

Thompson fanned six and walked not a man until two got to him in the ninth.

He passed Billy Herman, first up, yielded a single to Augie Galan, put Hank Leiber down on strikes for a third time and got Dominic Dallessandro to hoist.

Pinch - hitter Phil Cavarretta worned the second free ticket to fill the bases and Herman crossed pay dirt as Thompson pitched wild.

Through eight innings, not a Cub reached second base and the first ten to face Gene went down in order.

Meanwhile, last year's league champions were pecking away at Claude Passeau for eight safeties, one at a time except in the eighth-inning scoring rally.

Paw Paw High School Sports Improvement

Paw Paw, W. Va., April 18.—Paw Paw high school's baseball nine boasts of four straight wins after walking up a 12-4 victory over CaCapon high school here this week to give them a Morgan county scholastic championship for the second time in two years, the local high school having held the basketball championship title during the 1938-39 season for the first time in the history of the school.

A very definite improvement has been noted in the local high school's sports activities during the past two years in sportsmanship as well as victories. A large measure of this improvement may be credited to Coach Arnet Swisher's already splendid record.

Swisher, a graduate of Keyser high and Shepard college, has also attended Potomac State and West Virginia university. His twelve years of service in the schools of Mineral county included coaching and teaching at Elk Garden high from 1927 to 1935.

It was while at Elk Garden that Swisher developed strong scholastic quads. One of his teams copped sectional honors with a record of victories in 30 games.

Back in 1931 members of a team he trained at Elk Garden, transferred to Kitzmiller (Md.) high the final year of study, Elk Garden offering only three years of school work and it was this that gave Allegany high's state championship quint a scare in the eliminations.

In recent years Swisher has also coached the Elk Garden Independents and Elk Garden K. of P. quints with success.

County Softball Circuit Still Open

The eighth franchise in the Allegany County Softball League was claimed last night following a meeting Wednesday at the LaVale Fire Hall where action was formally taken on the withdrawal of the Bel-Air Restaurant team of Frostburg from the loop.

Officers of the circuit will contact several prospects and report at a meeting to be held next Wednesday in the LaVale Fire Hall. If it is found impossible to fill the vacancy, the first half will be played as scheduled with clubs idle on days when to oppose Harris.

Because of inclement weather, it was decided to move back the deadline for clubs to be under the 20-player limit. Each team can carry 30 players until May 15.

At the next meeting, player contracts will be approved. The contracts of tossers who will appear in opening games should be in the hands of Secretary Lloyd Smith before tomorrow evening.

During the second half, each team will play three games weekly on Tuesday's Wednesdays and Fridays. Umpires will be approved at the next meeting.

Question of Ethics Arises In Case of Whitlow Wyatt

By JOHN LARDNER
Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, April 18—A question of professional ethics arises this spring in the case of John Whitlow Wyatt, Brooklyn's right-handed pitcher, one of whose knees is notoriously unsound.

There is nothing wrong with Wyatt's arm. If the enemy batsmen were to hit straightaway ninety per cent of the time, as they do in an average ball game (the average is about three bunts in thirty times at bat), Wyatt would have no trouble being a winning pitcher. In fact, he would likely win twenty games.

Knowing his weakness, however, his rivals in the National League are disposed to bunt the ball repeatedly to the neighborhood of his position, with the idea of forcing him to put extra pressure on his game knee in galloping around and fielding and making the awkward throw to first.

This policy was pursued by the Boston Bees on opening day. At least, the Bees bunted more often than normally till the late innings of the game, when, trailing by five runs, they had to revert to straightaway hitting.

But It Didn't Work

The scheme didn't work. Wyatt's high hard one was too fast for successful bunting, and he pitched a shutout. But were the Bees ashamed of themselves? Not at all. Will they try the same thing next time? Probably. And will the rest of the teams in the league do likewise? I think so.

An Englishman would have no difficulty summing up this sort of procedure. "It ain't cricket," he would say. He might even say, "It isn't cricket," if he were a highly educated Limey. And the average Major League ball player would reply:

"H—ll no, it's not cricket. But we're not playing cricket."

The question is slightly delicate, but I think that on the whole I side with the ball player. Baseball is played hard, fast, and for keeps, and not to be able to bunt at will against Wyatt imposes a handicap on every other team in the league and on all of its members.

Carry the point to its logical conclusion. Suppose some team had a blind batsman. Should the opposing pitcher walk him every time, or should he throw the ball across the plate, thus exploiting the blind man's weakness?

You'll say that no ball club playing professionally would put a blind man in the lineup. True enough, and neither would any club use a one-legged pitcher—merely a further aggravation of an injury like Wyatt's—unless its manager knew the man could field his position with sufficient agility to make the move worthwhile.

The Enemy's Attitude

The feeling of the enemy is, Brooklyn should not be working Wyatt unless the is able to do everything a pitcher can be expected to do, which includes the fielding of bunts. If he wants to go in there, let him protect himself. He is on his own. That is the attitude of the Bees, etc., and its justice is shown by the fact that Wyatt and the Dodgers feel the same way. They expect no favors.

Since baseball is a living to the players, as well as a public entertainment, it boils down to a matter of the survival of the fittest. And all the way around the league on this first Spring swing, you are sure to see the boys bunting at John Whitlow Wyatt.

Happily, Wyatt so far seems able to defend himself. His shutout in Boston was fully earned. His knee, which had more water on it last year than there is in the bed of Lake Erie, is sound enough for the time being to render the gentleman more or less buntproof. Let us wish him luck, as the saying goes.

At his best, this long and unconfiding right-hander, who speaks twelve words a week, and all strictly to the purpose, is about as good a pitcher as there is in the National League. He is not an American League pitcher, as the record shows—not quite fast enough. But his stuff, like Bucky Walter's stuff, is peculiarly adapted to life in the National, and the next two years should find him just about as steady a winner as Walters if the knee holds up.

This is vitally important to Brooklyn. Without a consistent pitcher to hold the front with Casey and Hamlin, the Dodgers are short-handed in the most significent department in baseball. With Wyatt taking his turn and winning, they have as good a chance for the pennant as anybody else.

The next month will give the "tell."

Young Jim Bagby Blanks Senators As Red Sox Win 7-0

Boston Shuts Out Nats Second Time in Two Starts

Washington, April 18 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox, with young Jim Bagby hurling 5 hit ball, shut out Washington 7 to 0 today for their second straight white-washing of the Senators.

Old Lefty Grove beat Washington, 1 to 0, in the first game on Tuesday.

Boston started off today on Rookie Sid Hudson in the third inning, Doc Cramer singling Dom Di Maggio home. The Sox got 3 more runs in the 3rd when Jimmy Foxx socked his first homer of the year with two on.

"LIPPY" OPENS UP THE SEASON

ABOUT PAST GLORIES

Dream, if you will, of the fame that once made you
One of the upper set.
But only remember they rarely remember
As quickly as they forget.
Too many have rushed to the heights you surrendered
That only the mob can see.
So please don't expect you can ever collect
For the fellow you used to be.

You had your day and you had your glory,
But time sets a dizzy pace.
They fill the gap in a blasting hurry
The second you quit the race.
Take it out in dreams, if there's nothing better,
For the old cheers, loud and free,
But please don't expect you can ever collect
For the winner that used to be.

The Toughest Training Job

Earl Sande, jockey, trainer, golfer and singer, was collared by your correspondent at Jamaica. The idea was to get from one of the greatest of all jockeys and one of the best of all trainers, the difference between conditioning horse flesh and human flesh for any hard test.

"I've had a keen interest in many forms of sport," Earl said. "I've studied and watched many forms of training methods. But a horse, especially a thoroughbred — a race horse — is an entirely different animal from a human being.

"I should say that training and conditioning race horses is at least ten times tougher than training a fighter, a football team, a baseball team or a track and field man."

"What is the biggest difference?" I asked Sande.

"I should say the biggest difference was that the horse can't tell you how he feels. He can't tell you about certain ailments that we can't locate. A thoroughbred can look to be in marvelous shape—and yet have some trouble he would like to explain, but can't. He may be underworked or overworked. We do our best to have him ready to run, but horses are all different. We can't always tell.

"A thoroughbred, trained for racing, is a pretty delicate animal. He is subject to colds and fevers, to indigestion. He is subject to hoof and leg injuries. His nervous system is tautly adjusted. He has to handle more tension than any five human competitors ever have to face. You can see that at the starting gate. He is geared to a high pitch."

The Case of Sunny Jim Fitz

This reminded me of the predicament Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons ran across in 1938 and 1939. Sunny Jim was dead sure that Fighting Fox was ready to give his best in the Kentucky Derby of 1938. I was with him on the Blue Grass Special.

Sunny Jim happens to be one of the great trainers of all time, with fifty years' experience to back him up.

Fighting Fox ran a woozy race. He was nursing the germ that kept Stagehand out of the contest. But at the time no living mortal could have told it. It was some form of "horse flu."

The same thing happened to Johnstown last year — and Johnstown was the fastest horse I ever saw, good enough to run a mile in 1.33 2-5 in a workout. Johnstown suddenly began wheezing, whistling or emitting strange noises from throat, mouth or lungs.

Where was the trouble located? Sunny Jim wasn't quite sure, and neither was Ben Jones, another eminent specialist. I happened to be with them when they talked it over.

"You just can't tell for sure," Ben Jones told me, "because the horse can't tell you. A human being can have certain troubles in his back or arms or legs. He can tell you about it. You may locate the trouble in his teeth or in his diet. But too often you have to guess with a horse. You may know he isn't quite fit, but you can't locate the reason. I mean not as often as you'd like to."

About Seabiscuit

One of the strangest cases in racing history is that of Seabiscuit, the all-time money winner.

Both Seabiscuit and War Admiral gathered in all the attention two fine trainers could give them for their match race, first set for Belmont in late spring or early June. When the showdown came neither was ready. Seabiscuit had some form of leg trouble — and he was no rookie. War Admiral wasn't right.

A few months later on The Biscuit was all set — and this time he won a classic.

Later on I saw Seabiscuit break down at Santa Anita and limp off the track. He was retired and sent back to the farm. He was supposed to be through. He came back a year later to run third and sixth.

And then suddenly Charley Howard's famous entry came roaring back to win his first $100,000 handicap and set a new track record.

The Biscuit was largely rawhide and heart to say nothing of flying feet. But he had his full share of equine ills.

Sande Is Right

Earl Sande has called the turn. A thoroughbred trainer has the toughest conditioning assignment in sport.

There have been race horses with the same all-around fibre that belong to Glenn Cunningham, Jim Thorpe, Bronko Nagurski, Paavo Nurmi, Davey O'Brien and others I might name. The main exception was Exterminator — the horse that was still carrying 138 pounds and winning at the age of eight years, which is well over thirty in the human scale of passing time.

As a general rule the trainer of a fighter, football or baseball player, can tell you how things are. But here we have close to 130 horses entered some time back for the Kentucky Derby, and there probably will be from 14 to 18 starters. Nearly ninety per cent, for one reason or another, will head for the gravel ditch and finish up where the woodbine twineth in the midnight swamp of the will o' the wisp.

Bradley Home To See Bimelech in Workouts

Lexington, Ky., April 18 (AP)—Col. E. R. Bradley, back from his winter home in Florida, was expected to watch his heavily-backed Kentucky Derby favorite, Bimelech, which he hasn't seen for several months, workout at Idle Hour Farm, near here.

Out of that look may come a decision when and if to race the colt—for the first time this season—prior to the May 4 race at Churchill Downs.

Bradley's arrival coincided with reports that Bimelech, although eligible for the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland race course April 25, may not make his debut as a 3-year-old until the Derby.

Bimelech was undefeated in six starts as a 2-year-old.

Fort Hill To Hold Banquet Next Week

Fort Hill High's second annual Honor and Awards banquet will be held next Thursday, April 25, in the school cafeteria at 6:30, Principal Victor D. Heisey announced yesterday.

This event, inaugurated last spring, takes the place of dinners and banquets held in the past in honor of various athletic and student activity groups.

The guest list next Thursday will include all Fort Hill students who have participated in extra-curricular activities during the 1939-40 terms. Members of the school's fine band, staffs of Fort Hill's publications, Sentinel football, basketball, swimming, track and baseball athletes, and members of the various debating, dramatic and other clubs will share equally in the honors.

Tri-County League Meeting Postponed

The Tri-County Baseball League meeting originally scheduled this evening at the Central YMCA has been postponed until next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, it was announced last night by Secretary Thomas Gilchrist Jr. The schedule, drawn up by Gilchrist, will be submitted for approval at next week's session.

Here's a Candidate For Feedbag Derby

Louisville, Ky., (AP) — If A. L. Ferguson's Black Brummel could eat his way to a Kentucky Derby victory, he'd be a handsdown favorite.

The big gelding gets a daily ration of 13 quarts of oats—one more than the ravenous Lawrin, winer of the 1938 Derby, received—all the hay he wants and corn every third or fourth day.

But then the Brummel is one of the largest thoroughbreds nominated for this year's running of the Derby. He measures 16.3 hands and weighs upward of 1,100 pounds.

Oddly, too, Black Brummel is not black. He was registered as "black" as a foal but since that time has turned into a brown.

Something New, Something Old

Denver (AP)—This year's national A.A.U. cage championship was the first for the Bartletville, Okla., Phillips, but three of their players have enjoyed the thrill before. Fred Pralle and Frank Groves played on the Kansas City, Kas., Healeys' champions of 1938 and Joe Fortenberry was center on the McPherson, Kas., Refiners, winners in 1936.

Cincinnati Sweeps Series with Chicago

Young Red Hurler Shows Great Form To Top Claude Passeau

Cub Pitcher also Shows Winning Form but Is Defeated

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP)—Magnificent five-hit hurling by young Gene Thompson, plus successive eight-inning doubles by rookie Mike McCormick and Billy Myers with a man on base, gave the Reds a series-sweeping 2 to 1 victory over Chicago's Cubs today.

The cold, damp day, better suited to touchdowns than base hits, found both Thompson and Claude Passeau in mid-Summer form before an overcoated crowd of 1,536.

Thompson fanned six and walked not a man until two got to him in the ninth.

He passed Billy Herman, first up, yielded a single to Augie Galan, put Hank Leiber down on strikes for a third time and got Dominic Dallessandro to hoist.

Pinch - hitter Phil Cavarretta worried the second free ticket to fill the bases and Herman crossed pay dirt as Thompson pitched wild.

Through eight innings, not a Cub reached second base and the first ten to face Gene went down in order.

Meanwhile, last year's league champions were pecking away at Claude Passeau for eight safeties, one at a time except in the eighth-inning scoring rally.

Paw Paw High School Sports Improvement

Paw Paw, W. Va., April 18.—Paw Paw high school's baseball nine boasts of four straight wins after walking up a 12-4 victory over Great CaCapon high school here this week to give them a Morgan county scholastic championship for the second time in two years, the local high school having held the basketball championship title during the 1938-39 season for the first time in the history of the school.

A very definite improvement has been noted in the local high school's sports activities during the past two years in sportsmanship as well as victories. A large measure of this improvement may be credited to Coach Arnet Swisher's already splendid record.

Swisher, a graduate of Keyser high and Shepard college, has also attended Potomac State and West Virginia university. His twelve years of service in the schools of Mineral county included coaching and teaching at Elk Garden high from 1927 to 1935.

It was while at Elk Garden that Swisher developed strong scholastic squads. One of his teams copped sectional honors with a record of 25 victories in 30 games.

Back in 1931 members of a team Swisher trained at Elk Garden, transferred to Kitzmiller (Md.) high for the final year of study, Elk Garden offering only three years of high school work and it was this team that gave Allegany high's state championship quint a scare in the state eliminations.

In recent years Swisher has also coached the Elk Garden Independents and Elk Garden K. of P. quints with success.

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, April 18—A question of professional ethics arises this spring in the case of John Whitlow Wyatt, Brooklyn's right-handed pitcher, one of whose knees is notoriously unsound.

There is nothing wrong with Wyatt's arm. If the enemy batsmen were to hit straightaway ninety per cent of the time, as they do in an average ball game (the average is about three bunts in thirty times at bat), Wyatt would have no trouble being a winning pitcher. In fact, he would likely win twenty games.

Knowing his weakness, however, his rivals in the National League are disposed to bunt the ball repeatedly to the neighborhood of his position, with the idea of forcing him to put extra pressure on his game knee in galloping around and fielding and making the awkward throw to first.

This policy was pursued by the Boston Bees on opening day. At least, the Bees bunted more often than normally till the late innings of the game, when, trailing by five runs, they had to revert to straightaway hitting.

But It Didn't Work

The scheme didn't work. Wyatt's high hard one was too fast for successful bunting, and he pitched a shutout. But were the Bees ashamed of themselves? Not at all. Will they try the same thing next time? Probably. And will the rest of the teams in the league do likewise? I think so.

An Englishman would have no difficulty summing up this sort of procedure. "It ain't cricket," he would say. He might even say, "It isn't cricket," if he were a highly educated Limey. And the average Major League ball player would reply:

"H—ll no, it's not cricket. But we're not playing cricket."

The question is slightly delicate, but I think that on the whole I side with the ball player. Baseball is played hard, fast, and for keeps, and not to be able to bunt at will against Wyatt imposes a handicap on every other team in the league and on all of its members.

Carry the point to its logical conclusion. Suppose some team had a blind batsman. Should the opposing pitcher walk him every time, or should he throw the ball across the plate, thus exploiting the blind man's weakness?

You'll say that no ball club playing professionally would put a blind man in the lineup. True enough, and neither would any club use a one-legged pitcher—merely a further aggravation of an injury like Wyatt's—unless its manager knew the man could field his position with sufficient agility to make the move worthwhile.

The Enemy's Attitude

The feeling of the enemy is, Brooklyn should not be working Wyatt unless the is able to do everything a pitcher can be expected to do, which includes the fielding of bunts. If he wants to go in there, let him protect himself. He is on his own. That is the attitude of the Bees, etc., and its justice is shown by the fact that Wyatt and the Dodgers feel the same way. They expect no favors.

Since baseball is a living to the players, as well as a public entertainment, it boils down to a matter of the survival of the fittest. And all the way around the league on this first Spring swing, you are sure to see the boys bunting at John Whitlow Wyatt.

Happily, Wyatt so far seems able to defend himself. His shutout in Boston was fully earned. His knee, which had more water on it last year than there is in the bed of Lake Erie, is sound enough for the time being to render the gentleman more or less buntproof. Let us wish him luck, as the saying goes.

At his best, this long and unconfiding right-hander, who speaks twelve words a week, and all strictly to the purpose, is about as good a pitcher as there is in the National League. He is not an American League pitcher, as the record shows—not quite fast enough. But his stuff, like Bucky Walter's stuff, is peculiarly adapted to life in the National, and the next two years should find him just about as steady a winner as Walters if the knee holds up.

This is vitally important to Brooklyn. Without a consistent pitcher to hold the front with Casey and Hamlin, the Dodgers are short-handed in the most significent department in baseball. With Wyatt taking his turn and winning, they have as good a chance for the pennant as anybody else.

The next month will give the "tell."

Young Jim Bagby Blanks Senators As Red Sox Win 7-0

Boston Shuts Out Nats Second Time in Two Starts

Washington, April 18 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox, with young Jim Bagby hurling 5 hit ball, shut out Washington 7 to 0 today for their second straight white-washing of the Senators.

Old Lefty Grove beat Washington, 1 to 0, in the first game on Tuesday.

Boston started off today on Rookie Sid Hudson in the third inning, Doc Cramer singling Dom Di Maggio home. The Sox got 3 more runs in the 3rd when Jimmy Foxx socked his first homer of the year with two on.

"LIPPY" OPENS UP THE SEASON

ABOUT PAST GLORIES

Dream, if you will, of the fame that once made you
One of the upper set.
But only remember they rarely remember
As quickly as they forget.
Too many have rushed to the heights you surrendered
That only the mob can see.
So please don't expect you can ever collect
For the fellow you used to be.

You had your day and you had your glory,
But time sets a dizzy pace.
They fill the gap in a blasting hurry
The second you quit the race.
Take it out in dreams, if there's nothing better,
For the old cheers, loud and free.
But please don't expect you can ever collect
For the winner that used to be.

The Toughest Training Job

Earl Sande, jockey, trainer, golfer and singer, was collared by your correspondent at Jamaica. The idea was to get from one of the greatest of all jockeys and one of the best of all trainers, the difference between conditioning horse flesh and human flesh for any hard test.

"I've had a keen interest in many forms of sport," Earl said. "I've studied and watched many forms of training methods. But a horse, especially a thoroughbred — a race horse — is an entirely different animal from a human being.

"I should say that training and conditioning race horses is at least ten times tougher than training a fighter, a football team, a baseball team or a track and field man."

"What is the biggest difference?" I asked Sande.

"I should say the biggest difference was that the horse can't tell you how he feels. He can't tell you about certain ailments that we can't locate. A thoroughbred can look to be in marvelous shape—and yet have some trouble he would like to explain, but can't. He may be underworked or overworked. We do our best to have him ready to run, but horses are all different. We can't always tell.

"A thoroughbred, trained for racing, is a pretty delicate animal. He is subject to colds and fevers, to indigestion. He is subject to hoof and leg injuries. His nervous system is tautly adjusted. He has to handle more tension than any five human competitors ever have to face. You can see that at the starting gate. He is geared to a high pitch."

The Case of Sunny Jim Fitz

This reminded me of the predicament Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons ran across in 1938 and 1939. Sunny Jim was dead sure that Fighting Fox was ready to give his best in the Kentucky Derby of 1938. I was with him on the Blue Grass Special.

Sunny Jim happens to be one of the great trainers of all time, with fifty years' experience to back him up.

Fighting Fox ran a woozy race. He was nursing the germ that kept Stagehand out of the contest. But at the time no living mortal could have told it. It was some form of "horse flu."

The same thing happened to Johnstown last year — and Johnstown was the fastest horse I ever saw, good enough to run a mile in 1.33 2-5 in a workout. Johnstown suddenly began wheezing, whistling or emitting strange noises from throat, mouth or lungs.

Where was the trouble located? Sunny Jim wasn't quite sure, and neither was Ben Jones, another eminent specialist. I happened to be with them when they talked it over.

"You just can't tell for sure," Ben Jones told me, "because the horse can't tell you. A human being can have certain troubles in his back or arms or legs. He can tell you about it. You may locate the trouble in his teeth or in his diet. But too often you have to guess with a horse. You may know he isn't quite fit, but you can't locate the reason. I mean not as often as you'd like to."

About Seabiscuit

One of the strangest cases in racing history is that of Seabiscuit, the all-time money winner.

Both Seabiscuit and War Admiral gathered in all the attention two fine trainers could give them for their match race, first set for Belmont in late spring or early June. When the showdown came neither was ready. Seabiscuit had some form of leg trouble — and he was no rookie. War Admiral wasn't right.

A few months later on The Biscuit was all set — and this time he won a classic.

Later on I saw Seabiscuit break down at Santa Anita and limp off the track. He was retired and sent back to the farm. He was supposed to be through. He came back a year later to run third and sixth.

And then suddenly Charley Howard's famous entry came roaring back to win his first $100,000 handicap and set a new track record.

The Biscuit was largely rawhide and heart to say nothing of flying feet. But he had his full share of equine ills.

Sande Is Right

Earl Sande has called the turn. A thoroughbred trainer has the toughest conditioning assignment in sport.

There have been race horses with the same all-around fibre that belong to Glenn Cunningham, Jim Thorpe, Bronko Nagurski, Paavo Nurmi, Davey O'Brien and others I might name. The main exception was Exterminator — the horse that was still carrying 138 pounds and winning at the age of eight years, which is well over thirty in the human scale of passing time.

As a general rule the trainer of a fighter, football or baseball player, can tell you how things are. But here we have close to 130 horses entered some time back for the Kentucky Derby, and there probably will be from 14 to 18 starters. Nearly ninety per cent, for one reason or another, will head for the gravel ditch and finish up where the woodbine twineth in the midnight swamp of the will o' the wisp.

Bradley Home To See Bimelech in Workouts

Lexington, Ky., April 18 (AP)—Col. E. R. Bradley, back from his winter home in Florida, was expected to watch his heavily-backed Kentucky Derby favorite, Bimelech, which he hasn't seen for several months, workout at Idle Hour Farm, near here.

Out of that look may come a decision when and if to race the colt—for the first time this season—prior to the May 4 race at Churchill Downs.

Bradley's arrival coincided with reports that Bimelech, although eligible for the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland race course April 25, may not make his debut as a 3-year-old until the Derby.

Bimelech was undefeated in six starts as a 2-year-old.

Fort Hill To Hold Banquet Next Week

Fort Hill High's second annual Honor and Awards banquet will be held next Thursday, April 25, in the school cafeteria at 6:30, Principal Victor D. Heisey announced yesterday.

This event, inaugurated last spring, takes the place of dinners and banquets held in the past in honor of various athletic and student activity groups.

The guest list next Thursday will include all Fort Hill students who have participated in extra-curricular activities during the 1930-40 terms. Members of the school's fine band, staffs of Fort Hill's publications, Sentinel football, basketball, swimming, track and baseball athletes, and members of the various debating, dramatic and other clubs will share equally in the honors.

Tri-County League Meeting Postponed

The Tri-County Baseball League meeting originally scheduled this evening at the Central YMCA has been postponed until next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, it was announced last night by Secretary Thomas Gilchrist Jr. The schedule, drawn up by Gilchrist, will be submitted at next week's session.

Here's a Candidate For Feedbag Derby

Louisville, Ky., (AP) — If A. L. Ferguson's Black Brummel could eat his way to a Kentucky Derby victory, he'd be a handsdown favorite.

The big gelding gets a daily ration of 13 quarts of oats—one more than the ravenous Lawrin, winer of the 1938 Derby, received—all the hay he wants and corn every third or fourth day.

But then the Brummel is one of the largest thoroughbreds nominated for this year's running of the Derby. He measures 16.3 hands and weighs upward of 1,100 pounds.

Oddly, too, Black Brummel is not black. He was registered as "black" as a foal but since that time has turned into a brown.

Something New, Something Old

Denver (AP)—This year's national A.A.U. cage championship was the first for the Bartlesville, Okla., Phillips, but three of their players have enjoyed the thrill before. Fred Pralle and Frank Groves played on the Kansas City, Kas., Healeys' champions of 1938 and Joe Fortenberry was center on the McPherson, Kas., Refiners, winners in 1936.

Tommy Bridges Limits St. Louis Browns To Seven Hits

Detroit, April 18 (AP) — Home runs by Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer enabled the Detroit Tigers to beat the St. Louis Browns 4 to 2 today for their first victory of the American League season.

Greenberg delivered his four-base smash in the first after Vernon Kennedy had walked Gehringer. In the sixth Hank tripled to center field with Gehringer on base.

Gehringer's circuit blow came in the eighth with the bases empty.

Tommy Bridges, veteran Detroit moundsman, limited the Browns to eight bases on their seven hits.

Hardy CCC Camp

Announces Candidacy

Thomas M. Gerard, Rock Oak, has announced his intentions of running for county commissioner in Hardy county. Mr. Gerard filed Saturday afternoon, coming in just before the books were closed.

Mr. Gerard served on the county court from 1930 to 1936. He served as postmaster at Rock Oak for twenty-seven years. Since quitting public service, he has been engated in farming and the lumber business.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Woerner announce the marriage of their daughter, Eula, to Paul Sherman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mose Sherman, which took place Wednesday, Feb. 21, at Winchester, Va. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. M. Swann, pastor of the Braddock stret Methodist church.

Plan Playground

At a mass meeting held at the court house Tuesday night, citizens and representatives of various civic organizations discussed the organization of a Playground Association for the purpose of purchasing the ball park and making it a permanent playground for the children of the community.

This can be made possible if the land is purchased and deeded to the town under a non-transferable deed. The town would then lease it to the association for its management under a 100-year lease, thus permitting the association to arrange for immediate financing.

This financing could be made possible by selling shares of stock to local organizations and interested individuals. As the association becomes self supporting, these shares could be retired.

C. M. Bennett, who was appointed temporary chairman, announces there will be a meeting on Tuesday, April 30, at which time it is desired that individuals and organizations make known the extent of their cooperation in this mater. Since the property involved is about to change hands again, it is imperative that the matter be settled quickly.

Wardensville Population

The population of the incorporated village of Wardensville, as reported from the office of the district census supervisor, R. E. Fisher, in Martinsburg, is 195 as of April 11, 1940. This is a gain of six over 1930, which showed a population of 189, but a distinct loss since the booming days of 1920, when lumber was king in Wardensville and the population was 745.

These figures, of course, are subject to correction and revision by Washington, but are as reported by Mrs. Zula Miley Pilgrim, census enumerator. These are the first figures reported in Hardy county.

Moorefield Personals

Armistead Fredlock, Elkins, who presented a program of songs at the annual Woman's Club Banquet in Romney Monday night, spent a few days with his cousin, Mrs. H. M. Calhoun. Mrs. Fredlock accompanied him.

Mrs. H. G. Muntzing, Mrs. S. A. McCoy, Miss Alice Heiskell and Mrs. E. M. Hyde were in Washington Tuesday and Wednesday to attend sessions of the national D.A.R. convention.

The Rev. Raymond Musser accompanied the Rev. C. E. Brandt and the Rev. J. L. Robertson of Romney to Alderson on Tuesday, where they attended a meeting of the Lewisburg Conference. The Rev. C. W. Fink, who is district superintendent of the Lewisburg district, is a former Moorefield pastor.

Miss Ollie McKenney, home demonstration agent, and Miss Louise Leatherman spent from Monday through Wednesday at Jackson's Mill, where they attended a Rural Electrification meeting.

Miss Cary VanMeter, Herndon, Va., is spending a few days with relatives in the outh Branch Valley, among them Misses Martha and Damie Gilkeson at the Meadows and Misses Kitty and Mary Williams and John Williams.

Miss Marie Belt is recovering slowly from a serious operation which she underwent at the Rockingham Memorial hospital in Harrisonburg last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Haven Sions have moved from the apartment in Bryan Lambert's home to the J. A. Hinkel property at Purgitsville.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, April 18 (AP)—Joe Medwick has progressed pretty well with his home-brewed course in how to lose friends and alienate people, and a few lessons from experts should enable him to step right out as one of baseball's biggest drawing cards. The one sure way to fatten the box office is to give the public a chance to work up a good, wholesome hate.

To date Medwick has confined himself largely to a surly, sulking, truculent attitude; to bickering over salary; to rows with his manager and teammates. He is unpopular with his fellow players and the public at large, but except for the fruit shower in the 1934 World Series the fans have been more or less apathetic to his presence. He lacks just that little something that can goad the public to a frenzy of hate.

It is an odd commentary on sports that fans will turn out in larger quantities to see an individual or team take a licking than they will to see a favorite perform.

Medwick might learn from the history of John McGraw and Ty Cobb, for example. Both were artists in incurring the wrath of the fans. McGraw made the Giants the most thoroughly hated team in baseball, and as a consequence they outdrew all other teams.

Cobb, with his flashing spikes, his arguments with umpires, his one-man poses searching through the stands to hunt up and knock down hecklers, probably drew more fans who came to see him taken off his high horse than came to admire his skill.

Jack Sharkey retired from the fight game reputedly a wealthy man, and the fans who contributed to that wealth did so in the hope they would see the hysterical sailor get his ears pinned back. He made it a point to antagonize everyone he could, and he did a pretty fair job.

Naturally, to be No. 1 in the hate parade an athlete must be above the average in ability. There is little satisfaction in seeing the downfall of an ordinary performer, no matter how distasteful might be his actions.

Medwick has the exceptional ability. He has a good start toward active unpopularity. A few more touches here and there and both he and the Cardinals would profit immensely. A good, convincing villain puts spice in any play. The rasslers found that out long ago.

Max Schmeling Is Anxious To Again Battle Joe Louis

German Would Like To Get by British To Meet Negro

Berlin (Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, would like to fight Joe Louis again if the pesky British would let him through the blockade.

Schmeling, tough and brown as a betel nut, dropped in at the Foreign Correspondents' club on the weekly "American night" to chat about the ten trips he made to the United States between 1928 and 1939 to whip or be whipped by the outstanding fighters of that dozen years, when he was always a contender and once a champion.

"I should like to fight him," said Schmeling. "I know better how he fights than anybody."

But Schmeling, who beat Louis once and then took an awful drubbing in return, has no great hopes of meeting the negro boxer again, what with a war standing squarely in his path.

Would Seize Him

"The British would take me off the boat," he said, making a gesture with his big hand to imitate a giant British plucking him off the sports deck of the Conte Di Savoia at Gibraltar.

Although he is 34 — a ripe middle age for boxers — Schmeling hasn't given up the sport. This summer he will fight his fellow German, Walter Neusel, with his own European championship at stake against Neusel's German title — if the war permits.

He is keeping himself in good condition, and looks it. When on his estate in Pomerania, on the Baltic coast, he runs about the countryside three or four miles, and while in Berlin he takes vigorous setting up exercises every day. He is a model of clean living. He has not smoked since he was 14 and does not drink.

LaSalle-Ridgeley To Play Today--Hyndman Game Stopped by Rain

LaSalle and Ridgeley will make their third try to completely open the scholastic baseball season this afternoon at 4 o'clock with Coach Bob Ziller's team one-up on their rivals in being rained out. Tuesday LaSalle and Ridgeley were rained out and got together for four innings Wednesday only to have the rain stop them with LaSalle leading 6-2 after four innings.

Yesterday LaSalle took another ducking when its scheduled setto with Hyndman, Pa., high got under the water bucket.

Errors Win Roll-Off In Trozzo Pin League

The Errors won the roll-off from the Hits by 162 pins in the Trozzo Bowling League on the Savoy Alleys. It was a five game match. Dick Collins was high with 192 single game and 815 for total games, pacing the Errors to victory. Barnett topped the Hits with a total games score of 793.

Tommy Bridges Limits St. Louis Browns To Seven Hits

Detroit, April 18 (AP) — Home runs by Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer enabled the Detroit Tigers to beat the St. Louis Browns 4 to 2 today for their first victory of the American League season.

Greenberg delivered his four-base smash in the first after Vernon Kennedy had walked Gehringer. In the sixth Hank tripled to center field with Gehringer on base.

Gehringer's circuit blow came in the eighth with the bases empty.

Tommy Bridges, veteran Detroit moundsman, limited the Browns to eight bases on their seven hits.

Announces Candidacy

Thomas M. Gerard, Rock Oak, has announced his intentions of running for county commissioner in Hardy county. Mr. Gerard filed Saturday afternoon, coming in just before the books were closed.

Mr. Gerard served on the county court from 1930 to 1936. He served as postmaster at Rock Oak for twenty-seven years. Since quitting public service, he has been engated in farming and the lumber business.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Woerner announce the marriage of their daughter, Eula, to Paul Sherman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mose Sherman, which took place Wednesday, Feb. 21, at Winchester, Va. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. M. Swann, pastor of the Braddock stret Methodist church.

Plan Playground

At a mass meeting held at the court house Tuesday night, citizens and representatives of various civic organizations discussed the organization of a Playground Association for the purpose of purchasing the ball park and making it a permanent playground for the children of the community.

This can be made possible if the land is purchased and deeded to the town under a non-transferable deed. The town would then lease it to the association for its management under a 100-year lease, thus permitting the association to arrange for immediate financing.

This financing could be made possible by selling shares of stock to local organizations and interested individuals. As the association becomes self supporting, these shares could be retired.

C. M. Bennett, who was appointed temporary chairman, announces there will be a meeting on Tuesday, April 30, at which time it is desired that individuals and organizations make known the extent of their cooperation in this mater. Since the property involved is about to change hands again, it is imperative that the matter be settled quickly.

Wardensville Population

The population of the incorporated village of Wardensville, as reported from the office of the district census supervisor, R. E. Fisher, in Martinsburg, is 195 as of April 11, 1940. This is a gain of six over 1930, which showed a population of 189, but a distinct loss since the booming days of 1920, when lumber was king in Wardensville and the population was 745.

These figures, of course, are subject to correction and revision by Washington, but are as reported by Mrs. Zula Miley Pilgrim, census enumerator. These are the first figures reported in Hardy county.

Moorefield Personals

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, April 18 (AP)—Joe Medwick has progressed pretty well with his home-brewed course in how to lose friends and alienate people, and a few lessons from experts should enable him to step right out as one of baseball's biggest drawing cards. The one sure way to fatten the box office is to give the public a chance to work up a good, wholesome hate.

To date Medwick has confined himself largely to a surly, sulking, truculent attitude; to bickering over salary; to rows with his manager and teammates. He is unpopular with his fellow players and the public at large, but except for the fruit shower in the 1934 World Series the fans have been more or less apathetic to his presence. He lacks just that little something that can goad the public to a frenzy of hate.

It is an odd commentary on sports that fans will turn out in larger quantities to see an individual or team take a licking than they will to see a favorite perform.

Medwick might learn from the history of John McGraw and Ty Cobb, for example. Both were artists in incurring the wrath of the fans. McGraw made the Giants the most thoroughly hated team in baseball, and as a consequence they outdrew all other teams.

Cobb, with his flashing spikes, his arguments with umpires, his one-man poses searching through the stands to hunt up and knock down hecklers, probably drew more fans who came to see him taken off his high horse than came to admire his skill.

Jack Sharkey retired from the fight game reputedly a wealthy man, and the fans who contributed to that wealth did so in the hope they would see the hysterical sailor get his ears pinned back. He made it a point to antagonize everyone he could, and he did a pretty fair job.

Naturally, to be No. 1 in the hate parade an athlete must be above the average in ability. There is little satisfaction in seeing the downfall of an ordinary performer, no matter how distasteful might be his actions.

Medwick has the exceptional ability. He has a good start toward active unpopularity. A few more touches here and there and both he and the Cardinals would profit immensely. A good, convincing villain puts spice in any play. The rasslers found that out long ago.

Max Schmeling Is Anxious To Again Battle Joe Louis

German Would Like To Get by British To Meet Negro

Berlin (Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, would like to fight Joe Louis again if the pesky British would let him through the blockade.

Schmeling, tough and brown as a betel nut, dropped in at the Foreign Correspondents' club on the weekly "American night" to chat about the ten trips he made to the United States between 1928 and 1939 to whip or be whipped by the outstanding fighters of that dozen years, when he was always a contender and once a champion.

"I should like to fight him," said Schmeling. "I know better how he fights than anybody."

But Schmeling, who beat Louis once and then took an awful drubbing in return, has no great hopes of meeting the negro boxer again, what with a war standing squarely in his path.

Would Seize Him

"The British would take me off the boat," he said, making a gesture with his big hand to imitate a giant British plucking him off the sports deck of the Conte Di Savoia at Gibraltar.

Although he is 34 — a ripe middle age for boxers — Schmeling hasn't given up the sport. This summer he will fight his fellow German, Walter Neusel, with his own European championship at stake against Neusel's German title — if the war permits.

He is keeping himself in good condition, and looks it. When on his estate in Pomerania, on the Baltic coast, he runs about the countryside three or four miles, and while in Berlin he takes vigorous setting up exercises every day. He is a model of clean living. He has not smoked since he was 14 and does not drink.

LaSalle-Ridgeley To Play Today--Hyndman Game Stopped by Rain

LaSalle and Ridgeley will make their third try to completely open the scholastic baseball season this afternoon at 4 o'clock with Coach Bob Ziler's team one-up on their rivals in being rained out. Tuesday LaSalle and Ridgeley were rained out and got together for four innings Wednesday only to have the rain stop them with LaSalle leading 6-2 after four innings.

Yesterday LaSalle took another ducking when its scheduled setto with Hyndman, Pa., high got under the water bucket.

Corbacio To Pilot Keyser Ball Club

Veteran Will Lead Newest Entry in Bi-State Circuit

Keyser, W. Va., April 18—Appointment of J. J. "Joe" Corbacio, local baseball veteran who has played with various Cumberland district teams in recent years, to serve as manager of the Keyser Moose club of the Bi-State Baseball League was announced here today by the baseball committee of Keyser Lodge No. 662, L. O. O. Moose.

Corbacio, one of the Bi-State's leading hitters last season with a .418 average, topped the loop's batsmen in 1938 with .385. He played with the Frostburg Merchants in 1938 and 1939 after serving with Lonaconing and Westvaco in 1937.

Corbacio, equally adept at both infield and outfield positions, has also played with Keyser and Eckhart clubs.

Keyser, lone new member of the Bi-State circuit this season, will have a club composed largely of local boys who have played with other Bi-State teams in other leagues. Corbacio indicated in confirming his selection to pilot the Moose outfit.

City To Tax Horsemen 2 Per Cent on Claims

New York City is going to get its first cut out of racing. It was announced at Jamaica Wednesday that, starting yesterday, a city sales tax will be inforced on all claims at Jamaica and Aqueduct, the two tracks within the city limits.

Hereafter horsemen making claims at these tracks will have to add 2 per cent of the amount of the claim to cover the tax. This action may tend to reduce claiming at these tracks to a minimum.

SERVICE LEAGUE BOWLERS DRAPE VEIL ON SEASON

City Service League duckpin busters closed a highly successful campaign Wednesday with an equally successful banquet, featuring catch-as-catch-can entertainment, at the Jockey Club.

Following the disappearance of a steak dinner served by the McGuire & Ricker Restaurant staff, President Leo H. Ley, Jr., turned the meeting over to Michael F. Prendergast, sports editor of The Cumberland News.

With a minimum of 50 games required for individual championships, George Broadbeck, rolling for the Queen City Dairy outfit, carried off high average laurels with a mark of 146 for 52 games. Charles "Gene" Howell, of the championship Charlton Brothers Transportation Company outfit, posted the high average of 150, but was two gamess under the required 50.

Davis Has High Game

Winners of individual trophies, in addition to Brodbeck, were Jim Davis, City Police, high game of 222, and Larry Simmons, Charlton Brothers, high set of 572, and the members of the Charlton team, Ley, Howell, Simmons, John King, Randolph Bender, Leo McGann, Fred Graham and Robert "Ace" Baker.

Simmons trailed Brodbeck in the race for the top trophy with 145 for 69 games, while Raphael Firlie, Swift & Company ace, was the "Iron Man" of the loop with a collection of 12,092 sticks for 84 games. Sam White, of Liberty Milk, and King matched Firlie's 144 average, while other leaders were Frank Bareis, Carl McIntyre's, 143, and Dan Langer, 141.

Corbacio To Pilot Keyser Ball Club

Veteran Will Lead Newest Entry in Bi-State Circuit

Keyser, W. Va., April 18—Appointment of J. J. "Joe" Corbacio, local baseball veteran who has played with various Cumberland district teams in recent years, to serve as manager of the Keyser Moose club of the Bi-State Baseball League was announced here today by the baseball committee of Keyser Lodge No. 662, L. O. O. Moose.

Corbacio, one of the Bi-State's leading hitters last season with a .418 average, topped the loop's batsmen in 1938 with .385. He played with the Frostburg Merchants in 1938 and 1939 after serving with Lonaconing and Westvaco in 1937. Corbacio, equally adept at both infield and outfield positions, has also played with Keyser and Eckhart clubs.

Keyser, lone new member of the Bi-State circuit this season, will be a club composed largely of local boys who have played with other Bi-State teams in other leagues. Corbacio indicated in confirming his selection to pilot the Moose outfit.

City To Tax Horsemen 2 Per Cent on Claims

New York City is going to get its first cut out of racing. It was announced at Jamaica Wednesday that, starting yesterday, a city sales tax will be inforced on all claims at Jamaica and Aqueduct, the two tracks within the city limits.

Hereafter horsemen making claims at these tracks will have to add 2 per cent of the amount of the claim to cover the tax. This action may tend to reduce claiming at these tracks to a minimum.

SERVICE LEAGUE BOWLERS DRAPE VEIL ON SEASON

City Service League duckpin busters closed a highly successful campaign Wednesday with an equally successful banquet, featuring catch-as-catch-can entertainment, at the Jockey Club.

Following the disappearance of a steak dinner served by the McGuire & Ricker Restaurant staff, President Leo H. Ley, Jr., turned the meeting over to Michael F. Prendergast, sports editor of The Cumberland News.

With a minimum of 50 games required for individual championships, George Broadbeck, rolling for the Queen City Dairy outfit, carried off high average laurels with a mark of 146 for 52 games. Charles "Gene" Howell, of the championship Charlton Brothers Transportation Company outfit, posted the high average of 150, but was two gamess under the required 50.

Davis Has High Game

Winners of individual trophies, in addition to Brodbeck, were Jim Davis, City Police, high game of 222, and Larry Simmons, Charlton Brothers, high set of 572, and the members of the Charlton team, Ley, Howell, Simmons, John King, Randolph Bender, Leo McGann, Fred Graham and Robert "Ace" Baker.

Simmons trailed Brodbeck in the race for the top trophy with 145 for 69 games, while Raphael Firlie, Swift & Company ace, was the "Iron Man" of the loop with a collection of 12,092 sticks for 84 games. Sam White, of Liberty Milk, and King matched Firlie's 144 average, while other leaders were Frank Bareis, Carl McIntyre's, 143, and Dan Langer, 141.

Colony of Crusoes Inhabits North Carolina Swamp Island

Natives of Crusoe Island still use big wagon wheels to conquer mud their swamp home.

Last of Six Articles

The (S) Feature Service

Wilmington, N. C.—Crusoe's Island is being rediscovered, and the ancient, self-imposed isolation of its people is being overcome.

The "island" is a small area of higher land in the midst of a vast swamp in eastern North Carolina. Geographically only 20 miles from bustling Whiteville, North Carolina, it is decades removed in time. Without a history or even a tradition, Crusoe's origin is buried in a welter of legends.

Neither Buy Nor Sell

A narrow rutty road winding through a tangle of undergrowth leads to the little settlement. Along the road, a visitor might be surprised to see alligators sunning on the mud flats, bears pawing through the thickets, or snakes slithering into brackish water. Few people ever went to Crusoe's, however; there was no good reason to go. Crusoans had nothing to sell and they bought nothing. More than that—Crusoans did not like visitors.

The island consists of a small store, a number of houses built from hand-hewn timber, crude fences around pastures and gardens. In Crusoe there are no automobiles, electric lights.

The French Revolution

Generations of inbreeding and isolation has put the stamp of distinction on their tongue and manners. The people are hardy, but hostile to innovations. A Crusoan usually makes what he wants or goes without it.

One version of the origin of the colony is that the Crusoans are descendants of a band of pirates who fled to the back country to avoid capture after an unsuccessful raid on the river settlements. Another paints their ancestors as a tribe of coastal Indians who were forced into the swamp by the early settlers of the Cape Fear region. Still a third is that the island was settled by French refugees in 1806.

However, the third version does have some basis in history. A small band of political refugees, narrowly escaping execution in France, fled that country immediately after the revolution. They settled first in Haiti, later coming to Smithville (Southport), on the Carolina coast. Historians have conjectured that this little band, fearing possible recapture, and hearing of the isolated swamp-island, pushed their way through the marshlands and settled on the island early in the eighteenth century.

Getting Into Step

Until recently the people of Crusoe had no other income than that which they eked out from fields, woods, and stream. With the advent of WPA, dozens of the inhabitants were put to work on relief projects.

Many of the children are being transported to a nearby school. Buildings have been built by the WPA to house its activities.

Some day the lonely island community may be brought into step with the striding march of progress. But today it stands, like a relic of primitive days inadvertently dropped into the midst of modernity, overlooked and unremembered.

Cross Warns Italy To Remain Neutral

London, April 18 (AP)—Britain's minister of economic warfare, Ronald C. Cross, declared here he believed that Italy wanted to be treated as a neutral, but warned her she must behave as one.

"We have no quarrel with Italy," he said. "We have every wish to be friends. But we are plain-dealing and plain-speaking people and we should like to know where we stand with Italy."

Colony of Crusoes Inhabits North Carolina Swamp Island

Natives of Crusoe Island still use big wagon wheels to conquer mud their swamp home.

Last of Six Articles

The NEA Feature Service

Wilmington, N. C.—Crusoe's Island is being rediscovered, and the ancient, self-imposed isolation of its people is being overcome.

The "island" is a small area of higher land in the midst of a vast swamp in eastern North Carolina. Geographically only 20 miles from bustling Whiteville, North Carolina, it is decades removed in time. Without a history or even a tradition, Crusoe's origin is buried in a welter of legends.

Neither Buy Nor Sell

A narrow rutty road winding through a tangle of undergrowth leads to the little settlement. Along the road, a visitor might be surprised to see alligators sunning on the mud flats, bears pawing through the thickets, or snakes slithering into brackish water. Few people ever went to Crusoe's, however; there was no good reason to go. Crusoans had nothing to sell and they bought nothing. More than that—Crusoans did not like visitors.

The island consists of a small store, a number of houses built from hand-hewn timber, crude fences around pastures and gardens. In Crusoe there are no automobiles, electric lights.

The French Revolution

Generations of inbreeding and isolation has put the stamp of distinction on their tongue and manners. The people are hardy, but hostile to innovations. A Crusoan usually makes what he wants or goes without it.

One version of the origin of the colony is that the Crusoans are descendants of a band of pirates who fled to the back country to avoid capture after an unsuccessful raid on the river settlements. Another paints their ancestors as a tribe of coastal Indians who were forced into the swamp by the early settlers of the Cape Fear region. Still a third is that the island was settled by French refugees in 1806.

However, the third version does have some basis in history. A small band of political refugees, narrowly escaping execution in France, fled that country immediately after the revolution. They settled first in Haiti, later coming to Smithville (Southport), on the Carolina coast. Historians have conjectured that this little band, fearing possible recapture, and hearing of the isolated swamp-island, pushed their way through the marshlands and settled on the island early in the eighteenth century.

Getting Into Step

Until recently the people of Crusoe had no other income than that which they eked out from fields, woods, and stream. With the advent of WPA, dozens of the inhabitants were put to work on relief projects.

Many of the children are being transported to a nearby school. Buildings have been built by the WPA to house its activities.

Some day the lonely island community may be brought into step with the striding march of progress. But today it stands, like a relic of primitive days inadvertently dropped into the midst of modernity, overlooked and unremembered.

GARDEN-GRAPH

A Two-Level Garden

Sometimes the garden space slopes or "falls away" toward the rear or side of a home lot, resulting in a low, damp spot where grass or plantings will not grow well. In a situation such as this a two-level garden often is the solution.

In building a two-level garden on low land, the first step is to put down drain tile, then build up with good top soil to the level desired, retaining the higher level with a "dry wall" of ledge stones, or flat-shaped rocks, as shown in the Garden-Graph. The two planting levels, as shown, enable one to arrange plantings which will transform the once ugly spot in the yard into a beauty bower.

The higher level in a two-level garden of this type is an especially good place to plant rose bushes, since the built-up ground will give them the drainage they need.

Walsh Opposed to Fleet Tonnage Boost

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Chairman Walsh (D-Mass) of the Senate Naval Committee expressed opposition to the U. S. Navy's request for a twenty-five per cent increase in fleet tonnage instead of the eleven per cent increase approved by the House.

Walsh told reporters, after a hearing on a pending authorization bill, that he was opposed to the twenty-five per cent increase because he did not think there were sufficient shipyard facilities to begin immediate construction of the vessels involved.

Walsh said he approved the suggested eleven per cent increase, adding that he thought the committee would make only minor additions to the House bill. The measure would authorize, but appropriate no funds for an annual outlay of $555,750,000 for new surface vessels and $99,152,270 for new planes for the next six years.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, insisted that the end of the European war might still find the navy lagging far behind in ship construction unless steps were taken immediately to expand the limits within which it now is building.

Third Intact Royal Tomb Is Opened

Cairo, Egypt, April 18 (AP)—The third intact royal tomb discovered in the history of Egyptology was opened here in the presence of King Farouk by the French expedition headed by Professor Pierre Montet at Tanis.

The tomb contained the mummy of Pharoah Amenemoteh, successor 3,600 years ago to Psou Sennes, second king of the twenty-first dynasty of ancient Egypt and believed to have been Solomon's father-in-law.

Other intact royal tombs opened have been those of Psou Sennes, discovered two months ago, and of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

The mummy in the newly-opened tomb has not been examined, but Profesor Montet said he believed it would be found to be covered with jewelry, as was that of Psou Sennes.

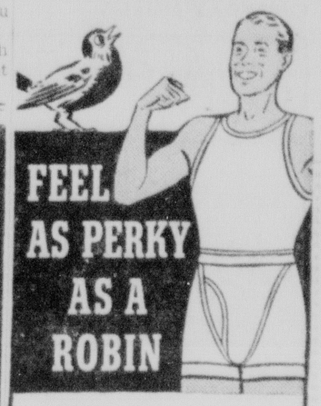

It reposed in a wooden coffin with the head covered by a magnificent golden mask.

"I'm reading a lot, now . . . and before I couldn't read a short article without getting a headache. I thought I couldn't do anything about it until I went to Roger Optical Co. to fix a broken lens. They discovered my glasses were wrong and had new ones fitted. Now I can read as much as I like with comfort!"

GARDEN-GRAPH

A Two-Level Garden

Sometimes the garden space slopes or "falls away" toward the rear or side of a home lot, resulting in a low, damp spot where grass or plantings will not grow well. In a situation such as this a two-level garden often is the solution.

In building a two-level garden on low land, the first step is to put down drain tile, then build up with good top soil to the level desired, retaining the higher level with a "dry wall" of ledge stones, or flat-shaped rocks, as shown in the Garden-Graph. The two planting levels, as shown, enable one to arrange plantings which will transform the once ugly spot in the yard into a beauty bower.

The higher level in a two-level garden of this type is an especially good place to plant rose bushes, since the built-up ground will give them the drainage they need.

Walsh Opposed to Fleet Tonnage Boost

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Chairman Walsh (D-Mass) of the Senate Naval Committee expressed opposition to the U. S. Navy's request for a twenty-five per cent increase in fleet tonnage instead of the eleven per cent increase approved by the House.

Walsh told reporters, after a hearing on a pending authorization bill, that he was opposed to the twenty-five per cent increase because he did not think there were sufficient shipyard facilities to begin immediate construction of the vessels involved.

Walsh said he approved the suggested eleven per cent increase, adding that he thought the committee would make only minor additions to the House bill. The measure would authorize, but appropriate no funds for an annual outlay of $555,750,000 for new surface vessels and $99,152,270 for new planes for the next six years.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, insisted that the end of the European war might still find the navy lagging far behind in ship construction unless steps were taken immediately to expand the limits within which it now is building.

Third Intact Royal Tomb Is Opened

Cairo, Egypt, April 18 (AP)—The third intact royal tomb discovered in the history of Egyptology was opened here in the presence of King Farouk by the French expedition headed by Professor Pierre Montet at Tanis.

The tomb contained the mummy of Pharoah Amenemoteh, successor 3,600 years ago to Psou Sennes, second king of the twenty-first dynasty of ancient Egypt and believed to have been Solomon's father-in-law.

Other intact royal tombs opened have been those of Psou Sennes, discovered two months ago, and of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

The mummy in the newly-opened tomb has not been examined, but Profesor Montet said he believed it would be found to be covered with jewelry, as was that of Psou Sennes.

It reposed in a wooden coffin with the head covered by a magnificent golden mask.

Worry of FALSE TEETH
Slipping or Irritating

Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wabbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. It's alkaline (non-acid). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

TILLIE THE TOILER — Now It's a Rule Mac Like To "Drop" — By WESTOVER

Thomas Finan Jr. Named To Head Forum Committee

Talks To Be Held In Allegany's New Auditorium

Thomas B. Finan Jr., young attorney, has been appointed to head the Community Forum of the Junior Association of Commerce, it was announced last night.

The Junior Association took over responsibility for the lecture series at the end of the 1939-40 season.

Appointment of Finan to this important position was made by President Helmer and approved by the board of directors.

Five members of the committee are yet to be named. They will be selected by the chairman in co-operation with the president and the board of directors.

Future forum lectures, it was announced, will be held in the new Allegany high school auditorium, which is about 700 seats smaller than the Fort Hill auditorium and thus will be much easier to fill.

The psychology behind this has long been recognized in the show world. The speaker and the audience both seem to enter into the spirit of the occasion much more readily if the hall is filled. In the huge Fort Hill auditorium there were usually hundreds of empty seats.

Helmer also announced that all forum funds would be kept in an account entirely separate from the association's treasury, and that any surplus existing after the close of one season would be spent during the next season.

Auto Salesman Found Guilty

Appeals $100 Fine To Circuit Court

Roy L. Burkett, of RFD 1, LaVale, sales manager of the Frantz Oldsmobile Company, was fined a total of $105 and costs yesterday in Trial Magistrates court on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

Burkett, who pleaded not guilty to both charges, filed notice of an appeal to Circuit court after the hearing and was released under $1,000 bond. Attorney Edward J. Ryan defended him.

Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Detective Robert E. Flynn, who investigated, testified they detected an alcoholic odor on Burkett's breath when they arrested him early Friday on Bedford street. His car was weaving about the street and he narrowly missed another car while driving on the wrong side of the street, the officers said.

Officers John G. Powers and Robert V. Chisholm also testified that Burkett was intoxicated. Both were at headquarters when he was booked.

Burkett said that he had attended a sales meeting at the Algonquin hotel Thursday from 9 p. m. until after midnight and that no drinks had been served him. He blamed his "weaving about" on a cigarette which he had dropped on the floor of the car and was trying to recover.

Others who were at the meeting and who testified for Burkett were Guy J. Frantz, manager of the Frantz Oldsmobile Company, William Duthie, and Ralph Frantz. Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, who was at headquarters when Burkett was released under bond, also testified in his behalf.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris prosecuted the case at the request of Assistant Chief Treiber. Magistrate Frank A. Perdew presided.

Girl, 12, Cuts Chin In Auto Mishap

A 12-year-old Valley road girl was cut about the face last night when she reportedly walked into moving car near her home.

The girl, Dorothy Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cook, of Bowman's Addition, was injured when she was struck by the car driven by W. B. McCoy, of 410 Chestnut street.

Two sutures were used at Allegany hospital to close a gash in the girl's chin. She was able to leave the hospital and return home after being treated.

State Trooper Austin H. Bikle investigated.

Playground Association Will Meet Tuesday

The East Side Playground Association will meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Roy Hinkle, Yale street, it was announced last night by President W. C. Brant.

Mr. Brant reported that the association's benefit card party Wednesday night at Girl Scout headquarters, Greene street, was largely attended.

Prizes for 500 went to a mother and daughter, Mrs. C. D. Neuman and Miss Wanda Lee Neuman; and Charles Frost and E. P. Wilson. Other prizes were won by Mrs. Robert Jefferies and Mrs. Thomas McCoy.

The proceeds are to be used to buy playground equipment.

Man Cuts Thumb

G. W. Bowman, 63, of Cresaptown, cut off the end of his right thumb yesterday morning at his home while using a plane.

County's Musical Might Demonstrated in Concert

Some 500 musically inclined high school students last night staged their annual musical Blitzkrieg on their parents, relatives, and friends at the Fort Hill auditorium.

This horde of talent, representing the musical might of six Allegany county high schools, presented a total of eighteen selections including band, orchestra and singing numbers.

The immensity of the thing was quite overpowering. The huge audience sat steeped in music for over two hours and gave every number vast applause.

At the conclusion of the performance a person felt something like a sponge that has just absorbed the Atlantic Ocean.

Band Enthusiastic

A 100-piece band directed by Victor Baumann led off with three numbers, including two rousing marches. Selections played were the "Under the Double Eagle," Romberg's "Will You Remember?" from "Sweethearts" and Sousa's "Washington Post March."

Baumann directed with plenty of zip, and the members of the band were mighty enthusiastic about their work. The toes of the players were as active as their fingers, the striped socks of one of the clarinet players were as loud as the horns, and all in all it was probably the most enthusiastic performance of the evening.

The Beall high school "triple trio" next sang three numbers, the most interesting of which was a cowboy song entitled "The Dogies." Mary Drum, Beall high music teacher, directed.

Orchestra Wins Applause

A 75-piece orchestra directed by Jack Platt won enthusiastic applause for its handling of Brown's "American Bolero". Drummers Charles Dites, Robert Smith, George Dayton and Dan Matthews performed admirably. The lighting effects were superfluous.

Attention focused on the fiddles during Guion's "The Harmonica Player" from "Alley Tunes." The concert master was Wilton Sykes.

Debussy lovers possibly were disappointed last night when Mr. Platt substituted another number for a Debussy reverie at the last moment. The substitute number was the "Procession of Sardar".

Three selections by Cain were sung by the A Cappella chorus directed by Miss Dorothy Sebree, all three numbers being presented beautifully.

Pretty Spectacle

The girls glee club of approximately 300 members next staged a colorful march to the platform, which was one of the prettiest sights of the evening. The songsters trooped onto the stage in single file and the merging of the various shades of blue, green, pink and other colors made a most attractive spectacle.

The girls glee club was directed by Miss Annetta Yates, of Central high school. The boys glee club followed with three more songs directed by Miss Doris Boal, music teacher at Bruce high.

Miss Dorothy Willison conducted the festival finale which included three selections by the boys' and girls' glee clubs with orchestral accompaniment.

Lighting Unnecessary

The lighting effects appeared somewhat unnecessary. There seems little point in blacking out an orchestra or even drenching it in a maze of weird colors like a neon sign. Good musicians are quite capable of creating their own moods without the use of stage effects.

And an audience enjoys watching the various musicians, which is one of the chief pleasures of going to a concert. The beauty of Wilton Sykes's bowing, for example, is vastly more important than attempt to create an artificial reproduction of a Corot haze.

Daughters of America Plan Convention

Mrs. Maude Kirk, of Barton, state official of the Daughters of America, announced yesterday that the Daughters of America of Allegany county would hold their annual district convention Saturday, April 21, at the Junior Order hall on Polk street.

The rally will begin at 2 p. m. with Deputy Elizabeth Long, of Baltimore, in charge. Luncheon will be served at 5 p. m. by Our Flag council, No. 100, of Cumberland, after which the meeting will continue.

National and state officers from Baltimore will make their headquarters at the Fort Cumberland hotel. Officers who will travel here and later make a trip throughout the city of Cumberland in a special bus Sunday morning, April 22, will include, Deputy Long, Mrs. Kirk, Mrs. Elsie Lehr, Mrs. Alvina Cole and Mrs. Isabel Nightengale.

Captain Millholland Discusses Defense

Cumberland Kiwanians yesterday heard a discussion of America's national defense forces by Captain Randolph Millholland, commanding officer of Company G of the Maryland National Guard.

Another speaker on the Program was O. J Miller, a representative of the recently-organized CMTC club.

R. Holt Hitchins, Frostburg and Cumberland architect, who was scheduled to discuss housing, was unable to be present.

Church Rummage Sale

The Ladies Aid Society of the Centre Street Methodist church will hold a rummage sale tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the church recreation hall.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

It's not easy to turn back the clock.

Allegany high students did a pretty good job of it the other night with their noisy, booming torchlight parade through the city.

They were making propaganda for "The American Way", the superambitious stage production the school is putting on, and the parade scene was supposed to be from the days of 1896, when Ohio's William McKinley was running against the Great Commoner, William Jennings Bryan.

The issue was free coinage of silver, which Bryan favored because it meant more and cheaper money, among other things.

So the students in the parade were supposed to shout "Hurrah for Free Silver", and similar slogans.

They tried this for a while, but it didn't make much sense. So by the time the parade reached Baltimore street they were shouting, "Thirty Silver Dollars Every Thursday" and "Heigh Ho, Silver".

They demonstrated one thing, however, with their hectic march. That is that Americans still have spirit, still know how to yell, and don't give a darn for goose-stepping.

Hurrah for Free Silver, Free Gold, A Free Country, and The American Way.

—o—

Our friends, the policemen, finally wrung out their sobbing hearts yesterday and baffled reporters are no longer baffled.

The reporters first took cognizance of a change in the policemen several months ago. At first, their attitude was merely wistful. Gradually their gravy eyes took on a deep melancholy tone, the sight of which stabbed the hearts of the reporters to the quick.

Of late, their attitude has been one of positive alarm, an attitude indicating that they expect the worst to happen any minute.

Reporters probed and probed but encountered only an aloof, injured dignity and pained expressions. All the officers would do was gently sigh and shake their heads.

The thing began to come to a head when reporters noticed that one officer when on duty stood with his back to a wall constantly and refused to turn around. He was a pitiful sight. When other officers passed him they merely shook their heads sadly and uttered not a word.

A reporter, worried over the officer with his back to the wall, finally ventured up to him and inquired diffidently, "Why don't you ever smile?"

Those eyes, dripping with sadness, turned on the reporter. "What is there to smile about," he replied sadly.

Soon after that another officer was heard to exclaim in a frightened voice, "Something has simply got to be done."

Reporters stared at each other and blinked. Soon after two officers were shifted around with no explanation being given whatsoever. It was all very mystifying.

There was Officer Luther Youngblood, for example. For weeks the expression on his face has been enough to make the Great Stone Face burst forth in tears. Suddenly, he was taken off a beat and put in a cruiser car.

He never gets out of the cruiser car. Now, his face has a relieved contented glow not unlike that of Trappist monk who has managed to get back into the monastery after playing hooky.

Yesterday, two reporters, goaded to desperation, stormed into police headquarters determined to learn the truth. What, they inquired, is going on around here anyhow? What has got into these big, husky men who have developed bleeding hearts?

The somewhat indelicate reply was, "Nothing, except the seats of their pants are all bustin' out."

Poor men. No wonder they stand with their backs to the wall. How can an officer carry out his duties with proper dignity and grace if he is not clothed behind?

Once realization of the horror had dawned, reporters carefully examined the persons of one or two officers. One officer, discovering that the reporters were sympathetic, sobbed out his story, showed great rents in this clothing that had been patched and patched.

"I look awful," he concluded.

The reporters went to see Mayor Irvine to see if he knew about the rags and tatters.

Mayor Irvine neither wept nor did he sigh. He threw back his head and guffawed.

The mayor, indicating he had been around a day or two, hinted that the suits would wear better if the officers didn't wear them to bed for pajamas, didn't wear them when not on duty and took better care of them in general.

"Who," inquired the mayor indulgently "told you all this nonsense?"

Referring to the transfer of one officer to a cruiser car, supposedly for the purpose of getting his ragged rear off the public street, the mayor grinned, "Commissioner Orr said he planned to switch that man to cruiser duty some time ago. It just happens this particular officer is the best driver they've got"

The mayor, still grinning, said "and here's something else you can say. What with the need of economy, it will probably be necessary for the officers to help buy their own uniforms this year. We've got to watch expenses carefully.

There you have the two versions of the Great Police Mystery.

Inasmuch as the policemen are going to have to dig down to garb themselves properly this year, reporters suggested a new type of outfit preferably designed by Adrian.

Sherwood Forest Green was suggested by one romantic soul, another voted for red, white and blue uniforms, another for rompers, middies and straw hats with ribbons.

It may all work out for, the best in the end

Seek To Bring Celanese Style Show to City

Chamber Also Tries To Get B'ata Tannery Here

Steps toward interesting Hidena, Inc., in the construction or leasing of a tannery in the Cumberland section were taken at the monthly meeting of Chamber of Commerce directors last night.

The president, John D. Liebau, was asked to name a special committee of chamber representatives in such a project.

Hidena, Inc., is the Maryland operating unit of the B'ata Shoe Company, mammoth Czechoslovakian shoe manufacturing concern, said to be the largest in the world, which has withdrawn from Czechoslovakia because of war conditions abroad and is building a large plant at Belecamp, near Bel Air in Harford county.

Company Undecided

The concern is considering the establishment of a tannery to supply leather for its shoe plants. Whether it will lease a suitable plant or construct a new one has not yet been decided.

The possibility of presenting a public style show of Celenase products under sponsorship of the chamber was discussed at length. Plans are under consideration by the Entertainment committee of the chamber, which hopes to announce definite arrangements in the near future.

Four new members were voted into the chamber, namely, the Fanny Farmer Candy Shop, the Davis Service Station, Charles M. Stump, and the Red Head Oil Company.

Endorse City Planning

The board indorsed the City Planning Committee meeting arranged for 10 a. m. April 26 at City Hall and urged members of the chamber to attend. Local planning possibilities will be discussed at the meeting by Charles Bennett, city planner of Milwaukee, Wis.

Report of the Mercantile Bureau noted that plans are being considered for a systematic handling of solicitations for advertising and similar activities designed to be advantageous to both advertising merchants and mediums. The plan has been referred to a committee representing all groups and it will meet for a roundup of the plan at 10 a. m. Tuesday at the chamber headquarters.

The bureau also reported that Adolph Hirsch would be the host for its next meeting at his residence at LaVale, which will be the evening of May 7.

Airport Project Still 'Kicking'

Committee Members Quite Optimistic

The Cumberland airport project is being kept very much alive by the Airport committee of the local chamber of commerce

Further steps toward development of the project at Wiley Ford, W. Va., under way for some time, were taken at the monthly meeting of chamber of commerce directors last night.

Among these was the use of the right-of-way on land over the Western Maryland railway tunnel at that point. Arthur J. Weber and James C. Shriver, reported in detail the work that is being done by committee and by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Weber reported that Western Maryland railway officials had agreed to co-operate fully with respect to the easement desired.

The Airport committee, under the direction of Shriver, has been working with the city engineer, Ralph L. Rizer, in preparing the estimate for the project.

The committee members expressed themselves as quite optimistic over prospects for early construction of the project.

Prowler on Loose In North End

Residents of the far North End were frightened again last night by the appearance of a prowler.

Mrs. John Bobo, 820 Maplewood lane, saw the prowler trying to force open a window in the home of Wilfred A. Thompson, 810 Maplewood lane.

The man was frightened away before police called by Mrs. Bobo could arrive.

It was the third time since Christmas, Thompson said, that a prowler had tried to enter his home.

Residents of the neighborhood are asking for more adequate police protection.

Something May Be Done About Cops' Britches

Something has got to be done about the policemen's ragged britches.

At least, that's what Police Commissioner James Orr said last night after hearing the gossip going around to the effect that the poor officers are busting out in the rear and at the knees.

Orr revealed last night that an order is now ready to be submitted to the City Council asking for bids on forty-five brand new police uniforms

The news was received with mixed emotions in police quarters. They will be more than delighted to get the new outfits but earlier in the day Mayor Harry Irvine, queried regarding the matter, reported that the officers would probably have to help buy their own uniforms this year.

Mayor Irvine said economy was the watchword at City Hall and that expenses will have to be shaved down.

Perry Clayton, 93, an Ex-Slave, Follows His Mistress in Death

Wrinkled old Perry Clayton, who belonged to an era which has long since become legend, yesterday followed his mistress in death.

The aged negro, who was a slave boy already fourteen years old when the guns of the Civil war began to rattle, dead just four days after his late mistress, Mrs. W. Wallace McKaig.

Old Perry, known to hundreds of people of three generations, had spent the last sixty years of his life in the service of the McKaig family.

Born in slave quarters at Easton, Mayland, the old negro passed away in Allegany hospital, ending a long life of such kindliness and dignity as would grace the pages of the most sentimental novel of the Old South.

After the Civil war, Perry went to Batlimore and served several families there as butler. He was in his thirties when he came to Cumberland as butler for the late Mr. and Mrs. Merwin McKaig, who lived then at Park and Baltimore streets. And when the family moved to 528 Washington street, old Perry went right along with them.

Fortunately enough, a well-known artist who was visiting here about ten years ago was so struck by the old servant's mien and character that he persuaded him to pose for a picture.

The result was more than a striking painting. It will probably endure as an important piece of the cultural history of this community.

Perry Clayton was the last of the old-time colored servitors in this section of Maryland, but his passing certainly does not mark the end of an era. The age and generation to which he belonged had left him behind—a colorful and eloquent remainder of other days.

They had planned to bring the body of the old negro home from the hospital, but the sudden death of Mrs. McKaig has caused those plans to be changed. Instead, his body shall rest at the funeral home until burial tomorrow.

Profit Sharing Plan Explained

Sears Employes Given Stock

Cumberland employes of Sears, Roebuck and Company are sharing in the $3,013,435 contribution which the company has made to its employes' "Savings and Profit Sharing Pension Fund".

This contribution for 1939, the local employes learned at a meeting Wednesday, brings the total number of shares they own in the company to 169. Through membership in the fund, they are, in aggregate, worth $13,040, basing this appraisal upon a market price of $80 per share for Sears stock.

Company contributions to the profit sharing accounts of employe members were made according to the length of their periods of service as follows:

How Money Is Divided

For members of the fund who have been with the firm for less than five years, the company contributed forty-nine cents for every dollar deposited by the employe during the fiscal year. For those who have served from five to ten years, the contribution was 98 cents for every dollar saved by the employe. For those with more than ten years of service, the company added $1.47 for every dollar of the fund member's deposits.

In addition, the company contributed 20 cents for every dollar (up to $91.00) deposited by each member, without regard to the members' length of service.

The fund operates in the following manner:

Five Per Cent Off Salaries

Five per cent of the salary of every fund member is deducted at the end of each payroll period and placed to his credit in the fund. However, all profit sharing fund members are limited to a maximum contribution of $250 per year, thereby limiting the contribution of the higher salaried employes. The company's contributions out of profits are made at the end of the fiscal year. The monies thus deposited in the fund are invested in Sears, Roebuck and Co. stock which is apportioned among members according to the annual deposits registered to their accounts.

The fund has 40,174 members. More than ninety-eight per cent of all eligible employes are members. The fund's current assets amount to $51,134,640, based on a value of $80 per share for Sears stock, and these assets are credited directly to the accounts of the Sears employes who are members of the fund. However, the actual money deposited by the employes in order to acquire these credits was only $12,941,945.

Widow's Case Is Appealed

Mrs. Pearce Seeks To Retain Property

Annapolis, Md., April 18 (AP) Efforts of Mrs. Julia W. Pearce, Frostburg, to prevent sale of property to satisfy a $17,400 judgment held by the defunct Citizens National Bank there went to the Court of Appeals today.

Counsel for Mrs. Pearce, who injunction petition was denied the Allegany County Circuit court admitted that, in 1929, she had signed the confessed judgment with her husband but argued she had done so under duress.

Her husband, the late George Pearce, took over Mrs. Pearce father's drug business, and borrowed thousands of dollars from the bank to put into it and ultimately had consolidated the debts into a single judgment, the record shows.

Real Estate Sold

The judgment was prepared in such a way that it secured notes which were renewed from time to time. Pearce died in 1937, and the real estate was sold but satisfied only a small portion of the debt.

"By this time," counsel for Mrs. Pearce stated in his brief, "Mrs. Pearce had been fleeced out of all her father's property, except . . . a house on Frost avenue."

When the bank's receiver sought to dispose of this, Mrs. Pearce filed the injunction petition. She claimed her husband forced her to sign the joint judgment at a time when she was too weak and ill to protest.

Because of this alleged duress, her attorney told the high court, the judgment should be considered void.

Duress Not Mentioned

Attorneys for George S. Arnold, the bank receiver, argued that for the twenty-five years during which the Pearces had business with the bank, Mrs. Pearce had not mentioned that she was signing any of the various notes under duress or protest.

During conferences with Arnold after her husband's death, she likewise made no statement to the effect, the appellees' brief asserted, and "She and Mr. Arnold even discussed securing a loan on the property and using the proceeds to pay on the indebtedness."

Arnold's attorneys asked the appellate court to uphold the lower court for lack of evidence to prove duress and in view of the fact she "permitted over ten years to elapse before ever bringing up the question."

Thomas Finan Jr. Named To Head Forum Committee

Talks To Be Held In Allegany's New Auditorium

Thomas B. Finan Jr., young attorney, has been appointed to head the Community Forum of the Junior Association of Commerce, it was announced last night.

The Junior Association took over responsibility for the lecture series at the end of the 1939-40 season.

Appointment of Finan to this important position was made by President Helmer and approved by the board of directors.

Five members of the committee are yet to be named. They will be selected by the chairman in co-operation with the president and the board of directors.

Future forum lectures, it was announced, will be held in the new Allegany high school auditorium, which is about 700 seats smaller than the Fort Hill auditorium and thus will be much easier to fill.

The psychology behind this has long been recognized in the show world. The speaker and the audience both seem to enter into the spirit of the occasion much more readily if the hall is filled. In the huge Fort Hill auditorium there were usually hundreds of empty seats.

Helmer also announced that all forum funds would be kept in an account entirely separate from the association's treasury, and that any surplus existing after the close of one season would be spent during the next season.

Auto Salesman Found Guilty

Appeals $100 Fine To Circuit Court

Roy L. Burkett, of RFD 1, LaVale, sales manager of the Frantz Oldsmobile Company, was fined a total of $105 and costs yesterday in Trial Magistrates court on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

Burkett, who pleaded not guilty to both charges, filed notice of an appeal to Circuit court after the hearing and was released under $1,000 bond. Attorney Edward J. Ryan defended him.

Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Detective Robert E. Flynn, who investigated, testified they detected an alcoholic odor on Burkett's breath when they arrested him early Friday on Bedford street. His car was weaving about the street and he narrowly missed another car while driving on the wrong side of the street, the officers said.

Officers John G. Powers and Robert V. Chisholm also testified that Burkett was intoxicated. Both were at headquarters when he was booked.

Burkett said that he had attended a sales meeting at the Algonquin hotel Thursday from 9 p. m. until after midnight and that no drinks had been served him. He blamed his "weaving about" on a cigarette which he had dropped on the floor of the car and was trying to recover.

Others who were at the meeting and who testified for Burkett were Guy J. Frantz, manager of the Frantz Oldsmobile Company, William Duthie, and Ralph Frantz. Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, who was at headquarters when Burkett was released under bond, also testified in his behalf.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris prosecuted the case at the request of Assistant Chief Treiber. Magistrate Frank A. Perdew presided.

Two sutures were used at Allegany hospital to close a gash in the girl's chin. She was able to leave the hospital and return home after being treated.

State Trooper Austin H. Bikle investigated.

Man Cuts Thumb

G. W. Bowman, 63, of Cresaptown, cut off the end of his right thumb yesterday morning at his home while using a plane.

County's Musical Might Demonstrated in Concert

Some 500 musically inclined high school students last night staged their annual musical Blitzkrieg on their parents, relatives, and friends at the Fort Hill auditorium.

This horde of talent, representing the musical might of six Allegany county high schools, presented a total of eighteen selections including band, orchestra and singing numbers.

The immensity of the thing was quite overpowering. The huge audience sat steeped in music for over two hours and gave every number vast applause.

At the conclusion of the performance a person felt something like a sponge that has just absorbed the Atlantic Ocean.

Band Enthusiastic

A 100-piece band directed by Victor Baumann led off with three numbers, including two rousing marches. Selections played were the "Under the Double Eagle," Romberg's "Will You Remember?" from "Sweethearts" and Sousa's "Washington Post March."

Baumann directed with plenty of zip, and the members of the band were mighty enthusiastic about their work. The toes of the players were as active as their fingers, the striped socks of one of the clarinet players were as loud as the horns, and all in all it was probably the most enthusiastic performance of the evening.

The Beall high school "triple trio" next sang three numbers, the most interesting of which was a cowboy song entitled "The Dogies." Mary Drum, Beall high music teacher, directed.

Orchestra Wins Applause

A 75-piece orchestra directed by Jack Platt won enthusiastic applause for its handling of Brown's "American Bolero". Drummers Charles Dites, Robert Smith, George Dayton and Dan Matthews performed admirably. The lighting effects were superfluous.

Attention focused on the fiddles during Guion's "The Harmonica Player" from "Alley Tunes." The concert master was Wilton Sykes.

Debussy lovers possibly were disappointed last night when Mr. Platt substituted another number for a Debussy reverie at the last moment. The substitute number was the "Procession of Sardar".

Three selections by Cain were sung by the A Cappella chorus directed by Miss Dorothy Sebree, all three numbers being presented beautifully.

Pretty Spectacle

The girls glee club of approximately 300 members next staged a colorful march to the platform, which was one of the prettiest sights of the evening. The songsters trooped onto the stage in single file and the merging of the various shades of blue, green, pink and, other colors made a most attractive spectacle.

The girls glee club was directed by Miss Annetta Yates, of Central high school. The boys glee club followed with three more songs directed by Miss Doris Boal, music teacher at Bruce high.

Miss Dorothy Willison conducted the festival finale which included three selections by the boys' and girls' glee clubs with orchestral accompaniment.

Lighting Unnecessary

The lighting effects appeared somewhat unnecessary. There seems little point in blacking out an orchestra or even drenching it in a maze of weird colors like a neon sign. Good musicians are quite capable of creating their own moods without the use of stage effects.

And an audience enjoys watching the various musicians, which is one of the chief pleasures of going to a concert. The beauty of Wilton Sykes's bowing, for example, is vastly more important than attempt to create an artificial reproduction of a Corot haze.

Daughters of America Plan Convention

Mrs. Maude Kirk, of Barton, state official of the Daughters of America, announced yesterday that the Daughters of America of Allegany county would hold their annual district convention Saturday, April 21, at the Junior Order hall on Polk street.

Church Rummage Sale

The Ladies Aid Society of the Centre Street Methodist church will hold a rummage sale tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the church recreation hall.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

It's not easy to turn back the clock.

Allegany high students did a pretty good job of it the other night with their noisy, booming torchlight parade through the city.

They were making propaganda for "The American Way", the superambitious stage production the school is putting on, and the parade scene was supposed to be from the days of 1896, when Ohio's William McKinley was running against the Great Commoner, William Jennings Bryan.

The issue was free coinage of silver, which Bryan favored because it meant more and cheaper money, among other things.

So the students in the parade were supposed to shout "Hurrah for Free Silver", and similar slogans.

They tried this for a while, but it didn't make much sense. So by the time the parade reached Baltimore street they were shouting "Thirty Silver Dollars Every Thursday" and "Heigh Ho, Silver".

They demonstrated one thing, however, with their hectic march. That is that Americans still have spirit, still know how to yell, and don't give a darn for goose-stepping.

Hurrah for Free Silver, Free Gold, A Free Country, and The American Way.

—o—

Our friends, the policemen, finally wrung out their sobbing hearts yesterday and baffled reporters are no longer baffled.

The reporters first took cognizance of a change in the policemen several months ago. At first, their attitude was merely wistful. Gradually their gravy eyes took on a deep melancholy tone, the sight of which stabbed the hearts of the reporters to the quick.

Of late, their attitude has been one of positive alarm, an attitude indicating that they expect the worst to happen any minute.

Reporters probed and probed but encountered only an aloof, injured dignity and pained expressions. All the officers would do was gently sigh and shake their heads.

The thing began to come to a head when reporters noticed that one officer when on duty stood with his back to a wall constantly and refused to turn around. He was a pitiful sight. When other officers passed him they merely shook their heads sadly and uttered not a word.

A reporter, worried over the officer with his back to the wall, finally ventured up to him and inquired diffidently, "Why don't you ever smile?"

Those eyes, dripping with sadness, turned on the reporter. "What is there to smile about," he replied sadly.

Soon after that another officer was heard to exclaim in a frightened voice, "Something has simply got to be done."

Reporters stared at each other and blinked. Soon after two officers were shifted around with no explanation being given whatsoever. It was all very mystifying.

There was Officer Luther Youngblood, for example. For weeks the expression on his face has been enough to make the Great Stone Face burst forth in tears. Suddenly, he was taken off a beat and put in a cruiser car.

He never gets out of the cruiser car. Now, his face has a relieved contented glow not unlike that of Trappist monk who has managed to get back into the monastery after playing hooky.

Yesterday, two reporters, goaded to desperation, stormed into police headquarters determined to learn the truth. What, they inquired, is going on around here anyhow? What has got into these big, husky men who have developed bleeding hearts?

The somewhat indelicate reply was, "Nothing, except the seats of their pants are all bustin' out."

Poor men. No wonder they stand with their backs to the wall. How can an officer carry out his duties with proper dignity and grace if he is not clothed behind?

Once realization of the horror had dawned, reporters carefully examined the persons of one or two officers. One officer, discovering that the reporters were sympathetic, sobbed out his story, showed great rents in this clothing that had been patched and patched.

"I look awful," he concluded.

The reporters went to see Mayor Irvine to see if he knew about the rags and tatters.

Mayor Irvine neither wept nor did he sigh. He threw back his head and guffawed.

The mayor, indicating he had been around a day or two, hinted that the suits would wear better if the officers didn't wear them to bed for pajamas, didn't wear them when not on duty and took better care of them in general.

"Who," inquired the mayor indulgently "told you all this nonsense?"

Referring to the transfer of one officer to a cruiser car, supposedly for the purpose of getting his ragged rear off the public street, the mayor grinned. "Commissioner Orr said he planned to switch that man to cruiser duty some time ago. It just happens this particular officer is the best driver they've got."

The mayor, still grinning, said "and here's something else you can say. What with the need of economy, it will probably be necessary for the officers to help buy their own uniforms this year. We've got to watch expenses carefully.

There you have the two versions of the Great Police Mystery.

Inasmuch as the policemen are going to have to dig down to garb themselves properly this year, reporters suggested a new type of outfit preferably designed by Adrian.

Sherwood Forest Green was suggested by one romantic soul, another voted for red, white and blue uniforms, another for rompers, middies and straw hats with ribbons.

It may all work out for the best in the end.

Chamber Also Tries To Get B'ata Tannery Here

Steps toward interesting Hidena, Inc., in the construction or leasing of a tannery in the Cumberland section were taken at the monthly meeting of Chamber of Commerce directors last night.

The president, John D. Liebau, was asked to name a special committee of chamber representatives in such a project.

Hidena, Inc., is the Maryland operating unit of the B'ata Shoe Company, mammoth Czechoslovakian shoe manufacturing concern, said to be the largest in the world, which has withdrawn from Czechoslovakia because of war conditions abroad and is building a large plant at Belecamp, near Bel Air in Harford county.

Company Undecided

The concern is considering the establishment of a tannery to supply leather for its shoe plants. Whether it will lease a suitable plant or construct a new one has not yet been decided.

The possibility of presenting a public style show of Celenase products under sponsorship of the chamber was discussed at length. Plans are under consideration by the Entertainment committee of the chamber, which hopes to announce definite arrangements in the near future.

Four new members were voted into the chamber, namely, the Fanny Farmer Candy Shop, the Davis Service Station, Charles M. Stump, and the Red Head Oil Company.

The bureau also reported that Adolph Hirsch would be the host for its next meeting at his residence at LaVale, which will be the evening of May 7.

Airport Project Still 'Kicking'

Committee Members Quite Optimistic

The Cumberland airport project is being kept very much alive by the Airport committee of the local chamber of commerce.

Further steps toward development of the project at Wiley Ford, W. Va., under way for some time, were taken at the monthly meeting of chamber of commerce directors last night.

Among these was the use of the right-of-way on land over the Western Maryland railway tunnel at that point. Arthur J. Weber and James C. Shriver, reported in detail the work that is being done by committee and by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Weber reported that Western Maryland railway officials had agreed to co-operate fully with respect to the easement desired.

The Airport committee, under the direction of Shriver, has been working with the city engineer, Ralph L. Rizer, in preparing the estimate for the project.

The committee members expressed themselves as quite optimistic over prospects for early construction of the project.

Perry Clayton, 93, an Ex-Slave, Follows His Mistress in Death

Wrinkled old Perry Clayton, who belonged to an era which has long since become legend, yesterday followed his mistress in death.

The aged negro, who was a slave boy already fourteen years old when the guns of the Civil war began to rattle, dead just four days after his late mistress, Mrs. W. Wallace McKaig.

Old Perry, known to hundreds of people of three generations, had spent the last sixty years of his life in the service of the McKaig family.

Born in slave quarters at Eastton, Mayland, the old negro passed away in Allegany hospital, ending a long life of such kindliness and dignity as would grace the pages of the most sentimental novel of the Old South.

After the Civil war, Perry went to Baltimore and served several families there as butler. He was in his thirties when he came to Cumberland as butler for the late Mr. and Mrs. Merwin McKaig, who lived then at Park and Baltimore streets. And when the family moved to 528 Washington street, old Perry went right along with them.

Fortunately enough, a well-known artist who was visiting here about ten years ago was so struck by the old servant's mien and character that he persuaded him to pose for a picture.

The result was more than a striking painting. It will probably endure as an important piece of the cultural history of this community.

Perry Clayton was the last of the old-time colored servitors in this section of Maryland, but his passing certainly does not mark the end of an era. The age and generation to which he belonged had left him behind—a colorful and eloquent remainder of other days.

They had planned to bring the body of the old negro home from the hospital, but the sudden death of Mrs. McKaig has caused those plans to be changed. Instead, his body shall rest at the funeral home until burial tomorrow.

Profit Sharing Plan Explained

Sears Employes Given Stock

Cumberland employes of Sears, Roebuck and Company are sharing in the $3,013,435 contribution which the company has made to its employes' "Savings and Profit Sharing Pension Fund".

This contribution for 1939, the local employes learned at a meeting Wednesday, brings the total number of shares they own in the company to 169. Through membership in the fund, they are, in aggregate, worth $13,040, basing this appraisal upon a market price of $80 per share for Sears stock.

Company contributions to the profit sharing accounts of employe members were made according to the length of their periods of service as follows:

How Money Is Divided

For members of the fund who have been with the firm for less than five years, the company contributed forty-nine cents for every dollar deposited by the employe during the fiscal year. For those who have served from five to ten years, the contribution was 98 cents for every dollar saved by the employe. For those with more than ten years of service, the company added $1.47 for every dollar of the fund member's deposits.

In addition, the company contributed 20 cents for every dollar (up to $91.00) deposited by each member, without regard to the members' length of service.

The fund operates in the following manner:

Five Per Cent Off Salaries

Five per cent of the salary of every fund member is deducted at the end of each payroll period and placed to his credit in the fund. However, all profit sharing fund members are limited to a maximum contribution of $250 per year, thereby limiting the contribution of the higher salaried employes. The company's contributions out of profits are made at the end of the fiscal year. The monies thus deposited in the fund are invested in Sears, Roebuck and Co. stock which is apportioned among members according to the annual deposits registered to their accounts.

The fund has 40,174 members. More than ninety-eight per cent of all eligible employes are members. The fund's current assets amount to $51,134,640, based on a value of $80 per share for Sears stock, and these assets are credited directly to the accounts of the Sears employes who are members of the fund. However, the actual money deposited by the employes in order to acquire these credits was only $12,941,945.

Something May Be Done About Cops' Britches

Something has got to be done about the policemen's ragged britches.

At least, that's what Police Commissioner James Orr said last night after hearing the gossip going around to the effect that the poor officers are busting out in the rear and at the knees.

Orr revealed last night that an order is now ready to be submitted to the City Council asking for bids on forty-five brand new police uniforms.

The news was received with mixed emotions in police quarters. They will be more than delighted to get the new outfits but earlier in the day Mayor Harry Irvine, queried regarding the matter, reported that the officers would probably have to help buy their own uniforms this year.

Mayor Irvine said economy was the watchword at City Hall and that expenses will have to be shaved down.
